14-Day Truce Ends D. C. Transit Tieup; Most Trolley, Bus Lines Running Again

Wage Negotiations To Proceed; Status Quo Is Restored, No Discrimination

By John F. Gerrity
Post Staff Writer

Virtually all Washington's bus and streetcar lines were back in operation last night after 4200 Capital Transit Co. workers agreed to a 14-day truce formula and ended their strike for a 30 cents an hour wage increase.

The 35-hour walkout ended at 1 p. m. when more than 3000 strikers wound up a turbulent two-hour Turner's Arena mass meeting by an almost unanimous rising vote to go back to their jobs.

The back-to-work formula incorporated in an agreement negotiated by a freshly elected union committee, with company and U. S. Conciliation Service representatives, and approved by the meeting provided:

1. That the prestrike status quo be restored.
2. That all employes be returned to work without discrimination or penalties against strikers or the union.
3. That negotiations proceed for a 14-day period, beginning today at 10 a. m., before a special three-man Conciliation Service panel.

Appointed by Warren

Conciliation commissioners Martin J. O'Connell, Richard W. Goodrick and Gilbert S. McCutcheon were appointed to the Government panel by Edgar L. Warren, director of the Conciliation Service.

Service had been restored about 80 per cent at nine o'clock last night. Company officials said that all streetcars and buses would be running in time to take District and nearby suburban residents to their jobs this morning.

The first car to move with the resumption of service left the Navy Yard car barn at 1:22, bound for Cabin John.

Union, company and Government officials will meet today at the Capital Transit offices to reopen wage negotiations. The conferences will continue until a settlement acceptable to both disputants is reached or until the 14-day grace period expires.

November 21 Is Deadline

If no settlement is reached by November 21, the workers will again walk out, union leaders said last night.

The truce restored the transportation of 500,000 passengers who daily make between 1,250,000 and 1,500,000 trips.

The union's negotiating committee selected at a stormy mass meeting Tuesday met yesterday morning first with Labor Secretary Schwellenbach and Conciliation Service officials and later, with company officials. Representative Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.), chariman of the House District Committee was present.

Following a two-hour closed session the 14-day truce agreement was issued sending the workers back to their jobs and opening the way to formal negotiations.

The back-to-work memorandum was signed by union and company officials at 2:30 p. m., after the meeting ratified it.

500 MPs Were On Alert

The Fort Myer Military police detachment—composed of about 500 men—had been alerted since Tuesday morning, when the strike started. Officers attached to the post said last night that the detachment would continue on a "standby" basis until this morning.

The union's demand for a 30 cents an hour increase had been countered by a company offer to incorporate the 7 cents bonus paid to workers into the basic hourly wage. The company had refused to negotiate with the strikers on the grounds that the contract called for bitration and contained a "no-strike" clause.

Merrill Issues Statement

Shortly after the resumption of service, E. D. Merrill issued the following statement to the workers and public:

"We are glad to know that our men are returning to their jobs. As quickly as possible, we will get maximum service on the streets. We hope that by tomorrow morn-

Taxi Drivers Abandon Plan For Walkout

AFL Union Assured Prompt Action on Its Five Demands

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Staff Writer.

AFL cab drivers in the District abandoned plans to strike yesterday after winning assurances of prompt action on five union demands.

Charles Garrett, vice president of the local union, stated after separate conferences with Chairman James H. Flanagan of the Public Utilities Commission, and the District commissioner's that the officials had promised the union "fastest possible action" on their "grievances."

Also Confer With Randolph

Garrett and other union representatives also conferred with Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee.

Randolph said: "They have certain grievances which will be taken up at a later date."

"We have decided not to strike," Leon T. Glatfelter, president of Taxicab Operators Local 935, AFL Teamsters International Union, declared.

But union officials intimated strongly a walkout threat might be revived unless action on their "grievances" is speedy.

"Next Tuesday is 'District Day' in the House," Garrett asserted. "And Thursday night is a membership meeting. The men will probably look into this thing again at that time."

Simultaneous With Strike's End

Withdrawal of immediate strike plans came simultaneously with settlement of the transit tieup. Cab

The Navy lost one of its football immortals yesterday—Marine Col. Emory Ellsworth (Swede) Larson.

The man who played on great football teams at Annapolis and later returned to coach them died at Atlanta, Ga., in the Naval Air Station dispensary there.

Colonel Larson, 46, had made his home in Takoma Park recently. Last October 18 he left here by plane for Atlanta on an assignment. He was stricken with a heart attack the following day.

Jobs for All Bill Spared By House Unit

Will Be Turned Over To Subcommittee Of Five Members

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer.

The Senate-passed full employment bill, keystone of the President's fight to save his legislative reconversion program, last night barely escaped a House committee pigeonhole for the balance of this year.

By the feather-edge margin of eight to seven, the House Expenditures Committee voted instead to turn all full employment legislation over to a five-man committee for redrafting before deciding whether to do anything about it this session.

The narrow squeak for the Administration came during a stormy closed session of the Expenditures group after six weks of protracted hearings finally came to a close.

"Common Sense Approach"

Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenback earlier in the day had indorsed the legislation as the "common sense approach" to the problems of unemployment.

8 Saboteurs' Leader Gave FBI Tip-Off

Atomic Project's Power Source Was Among U. S. Targets, Clark Discloses

By International News Service

The leader of the eight German saboteurs who came to the United States in 1942 in a submarine surrendered to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and brought about the capture of his entire band.

This was revealed last night by Attorney General Clark, who said that the capture of the saboteurs thwarted their plans to destroy the source of power for the atom bomb project in the Tennessee Valley as well as other objectives.

A 3-year-old mystery was cleared up by Clark in releasing secret testimony which sent six of the eight saboteurs to their deaths in the electric chair here.

Clark said that if the eight men bent on destruction of American war projects had succeeded, the atomic bomb might never have been completed and America's war potential would have been temporarily a shambles.

Surrender Was Tip-Off

It was the surrender of George Dasch, the saboteurs' leader, which tipped off the FBI to the fact that two groups of German saboteurs had landed in Long Island and in Florida in an effort to bring swastika terror to the United States.

His act was approved by another saboteur, Peter Berger, who had once been beaten and placed in a concentration camp by the Nazis. This was the reason the lives of Dasch and Berger were spared by the late President Roosevelt while six other saboteurs died in the D. C. electric chair.

Dasch's tip-off led to the capture not only of his own group but also the second group, which was led by Edward Kerling, a German army lieutenant in the First World War.

Former American Soldier

Dasch was a former American soldier, having enlisted in the U. S. Army in August, 1927. He served more than a year with the Seventy-second Bombardment Squadron in Honolulu and was discharged with an excellent character.

Berger was a former National Guardsman, joining it in Milwaukee in 1931. He served with the Milwaukee Guards when they were called out during the Milwaukee milk strike in 1933.

Targets Disclosed

The Attorney General disclosed that the Hitler-trained saboteurs were under orders to destroy the Aluminum Co. of America plants at Alcoa, Tenn., Massena, N. Y., and East St. Louis, Ill.

The deperate men from Germany also had orders to destroy the Creolite at Philadelphia, the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, the Pennsylvania Railroad depot at Newark, N. J., and the Hellgate Bridge in New York.

Their explosives were to have leveled Ohio River locks between Cincinnati and St. Louis, where moved up and downstream to war bases.

Also scheduled for destruction was the Pennsylvania Railroad at

Bevin Hints Suspicion of Red's Demand for Tripolitania Base

London, Nov. 7 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, hinting that Britain was suspicious of Russia's territorial demands, appealed tonight to the great powers to "really put the cards on the table face upward."

Bevin spoke in a full-dress debate in Commons on foreign affairs after Winston Churchill had urged that Britain support the United States in refusing Russia the secret of atomic bomb production. Russia, Churchill argued, would not share the secret if she alone possessed it.

While Bevin did not name Russia, he said:

"You cannot help our being a little bit suspicious if a great power wants to go right across the throat of the British commonwealth."

Referring to Demand

He apparently was referring to reported Soviet demands for sole trusteeship of Tripolitania, former Italian colony on the Mediterranean's southern shore, and a base in Eritrea—two steps which would leave Russia straddling British communications to the Middle and Far East.

Churchill and Bevin both indorsed President Truman's 12-point foreign policy program and said if this plan had existed in 1914 or in 1939 neither world war would have occurred.

Both men, speaking plainly and bluntly, repeatedly stressed British desire for even closer relations with Russia, and expressed belief that hope for the future must rest on a strong world security league. And both emphasized that the Labor majority and Conservative minority must see eye-to-eye on Britain's foreign policy.

Churchill urged the Labor government not to put "pressure" on the United States, in Prime Minister Attlee's forthcoming Washington talks, to make the secrets of atomic bomb production available to Moscow.

He said the Russians would have to be taken into American arsenals in order to understand how the bomb is produced.

"I am sure," he asserted, "if the circumstances were reversed and we or the Americans asked for similar access to the Russian arsenals it would be granted.

No Reciprocity

"During the war we imparted many secrets to the Russians, especially in connection with radar, but we were not conscious of any adequate reciprocity."

At the same time, Churchill praised Generalissimo Stalin and warned against any "state of mind" which might lead to a rupture of British-Russian associations. He said the world outlook in many re-

Stalin Absent as Million Reds Parade on 'Revolution Day'

Moscow, Nov. 7 (AP).—The mighty Red army and Soviet workers, perhaps one million strong, paraded through Red Square in a mammoth celebration of the Red Revolution today, but Generalissimo Stalin—hailed as the artisan of victory by cheering thousands—was unexplainedly not there.

In Stalin's place on the reviewing stand, dusted by snow, was Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov.

It was the first time in any Muscovite's memory that Stalin, who had been vacationing in the south, had missed this important celebration of the anniversary of the 1917 Socialist revolution. No explanation was offered officially.

Honored in Absence

But Stalin was honored in his absence by a 21-gun salute, thunderous cheers and bands when Gen. Alexei Antonov, Red army chief of staff, shouted "long live our commander in chief, Generalissimo of the Soviet Union Stalin!"

Orders of the day from army and Navy chieftains called on Russian soldiers and sailors to continue their training, to guard against the "giddiness of success," and to work for friendship.

Atop Lenin's tomb with Molotov were government heads and leaders of the Red army and navy.

Carrying out the ceremonial tradition, Molotov arrived with the official reviewing party and mounted the stands alongside the tomb at exactly 10 a. m.

Harriman Found Stalin In 'Fine Condition'

Secretary of State Byrnes told reporters yesterday that when Ambassador W. Averell Harriman saw Marshal Stalin about two weeks ago at a vacation resort on the Black Sea, he thought that the Russian leader appeared to be in fine condition. Speaking for himself, Byrnes said he did not agree with the alarming statements about Stalin's health.

Red army units from the Moscow garrison began to march after inspecting generals—four horsemen on sorrel mounts—had circled the square to make sure all was in readiness.

The might of the Red army, 20 men abreast with bayonets, poured through the square by the thou-

Fighting Confused

Chiang Army of 70,000 Troops Reported Routed by Red Units

U. S. Will Withdraw Marines From China Zones, Byrnes Says

Secretary of State Byrnes reported yesterday that the United States is planning to withdraw American Marines from China.

The Marines are now occupying various strategic towns between Communist forces and central government armies.

Byrnes said the Marines went to northern China to help Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek take the Japanese surrender and disarm Nipponese forces numbering about 1,500,000 to two million.

Date Not Set

Byrnes said that he could not say when the Marines would be withdrawn or whether they would all be pulled out at once or come out piecemeal.

Byrnes did not say specifically why the Marines are being removed. He reported he had talked over the Chinese situation with the War Department but was unable to verify reports of clashes between Marines and Communists.

The White House denied such clashes Tuesday.

Byrnes also said he had no confirmation of a report that one Chinese faction had taken two American soldiers into custody.

There are two divisions of Marines in China, assigned as garrison forces. Other forces there

Foreign Quarters Believe Full Scale War Is Inevitable

Chungking, Nov. 7 (AP).—Chinese Communists claimed sweeping victories in embattled North China today, including the defeat or surrender—with their weapons—of 70,000 Nationalist troops who had tried to keep open the vital North-South Peiping-Hankow railroad.

Intensified fighting flared on several fronts and both Chinese and foreign quarters in Chungking agreed that the situation is nearly beyond repair and full-scale war is almost inevitable.

Claims Outlined

The Communists claimed:

1. Decisive defeat of eight government divisions totaling 70,000 men, during which the Reds tightened their grip on the Peiping-Hankow rail line and recaptured the Hopeh Province rail junction of Tzehsien on October 25—blocking the northward movement of Chiang's troops along that route.

2. Under Gen. Ho-lung, the Communists drew their siege ring tighter around Kweisui, capital of Inner Mongolian Suiyuan Province. Other Red forces battled for the besieged rail junction of Tatung to the east and prepared to assault Paotow to the west.

3. To the south, Communists attacked in force several points along the Tatung-Puchow Railroad, including Hwohsien in southern

News Blackout Alleged

Seizure of Several U. S. Seamen By Chinese Reds Reported

San Francisco, Nov. 7 (AP).—Charles Miner, Mutual Broadcasting System's correspondent at Shanghai, reported today that a news blackout was clamped down at U. S. Army headquarters there following the reported seizure by Chinese Communists of several American crewmen from a Liberty ship in the Chinwangtao area.

Newsmen dependent on British sources were told, Miner reported, that some seamen were seized by the Communists but that some later were released.

An American Army spokesman in Shanghai, Miner added, refused to discuss the matter and the United States consul general's office refered inquiries to the Tientsin consulate, saying only "vague" reports had been received on the incident.

American Marines are stationed at Chinwangtao and some other places in North China. Their presence has aroused considerable resentment among Chinese Communists, who have charged intervention in Chinese internal affairs.

(The Associated Press has not so far received any dispatch from its Shanghai bureau on the Chinwangtao incident.)

Would Settle Wage Issue

CIO Head Continues Pay Hike Drive in Resolution to Parley

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer.

Continuing his drive to give substance to "the shadow of wages that is constantly hanging" over the President's labor-management conference, CIO President Philip Murray yesterday asked the meeting's executive committee to act on the "all-important" economic issue.

Murray's request, submitted in the form of a proposed conference resolution, was vastly watered down in comparison to the principles whose adoption he first urged on the conference. Rather than demanding it work out a solution to the problems involved in labor's current drive for 30 per cent wage increases, Murray asked only that the conference call on labor and management everywhere "to engage in genuine and sincere collective bargaining in an effort to resolve this all-important wage issue."

Meantime, a clew to the hopes of Labor Secretary Schwellenbach—and apparently of the Administration—for the ultimate goal of the conference came from Capitol Hill.

Testifying before a House committee on the Full Employment bill, Schwellenbach praised the Railway Labor Act as a deterrent to strikes on the Nation's railroads, and characterized it as "the most satisfactory piece of legislation in the view of everyone."

The procedures of that law, providing a cooling-off period during which an impartial fact-finding board investigates the issues in dispute and conducts mediation, have been widely discussed as the optimum sort of disputes machinery to replace the War Labor Board.

Advocates of that system hope that the conference wil call for its establishment for all American in-

Stock List Soars In Heavy Buying

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Heavy buying in steels, motors and other industrials lifted today's stock market 75 cents to around $4 to the best levels in 8½ years.

Volume was about the largest since June. American Telephone and Chrysler hit new 1945 peaks. Among factors in the rise were good tax prospects for some companies next year, a rush to invest idle funds and possible limited inflation through higher wages and prices.

Proposal Was Promised

U. S. Submits Plan to Turkey For Freer Passage of Red Ships

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The United States has made a four-point proposal to Turkey which would give Russian ships freer passage through the Turkish-controlled straits connecting the Black Sea and the Mediterranean.

In disclosing this yesterday, Secretary of State Byrnes denounced as inaccurate a news story from Ankara to the effect that the United States had assured Turkey that it would refuse to support any future action which might jeopardize Turkish independence or Turkish territory.

No Guarantee Made

Mr. Byrnes said that the United States had made no guarantees to Turkey, but simply had made proposals for revision of the Montreux Convention, an international traffic code applying to the Dardanelles and Bosphorous Straits. In making the proposals, the United States was carrying out an agreement entered into at the Potsdam Conference, whereby each of the Big Three promised to submit to Turkey its ideas of how the straits should be governed.

When Russia, along with eight other powers including Japan, signed the Montreaux Convention in 1936, it noted that the document recognized to "an insufficient degree" the primary interests of Black Sea nations—meaning herself, and Bulgaria, Romania and Turkey.

In essence the four-point program submitted to Turkey by the United States is aimed at meeting that argument, but it remains to be seen whether it gives Russia the advantages she herself might demand in the Turkish-controlled straits.

In recent months, Moscow has been carrying on what diplomats

Discharges Awaiting Return to Stations

Temporary-Duty Status Also Means Release; Overseas Plans Are Revised

By the Associated Press

The War Department last night anounced that enlisted men who have 50 or more discharge points and are now on furlough in this country will be released as they report back to the Army this month.

The new ruling also applies to enlisted men now on temporary duty in the United States. They will be classed as surplus and discharged upon their return to a reception center.

At present, the general discharge score for enlisted men is 60 points.

Chief beneficiaries of the action, the War Department said, are men who returned from Europe with units originally earmarked for duty in the Pacific. Orders for shipment of these units were canceled following Japan's surrender and they are no wscheduled for deactivation.

No Estimate of Number

There was no estimate of the number of soldiers affected.

During the day, the department also:

1. Authorized the immediate discharge of soldiers who were prisoners of the enemy for at least 60 days. Approximately 25,000 are affected.

2. Put new restrictions on overseas duty for enlisted men and officers—a step affecting approximately 125,000.

The department announced that, with a few exceptions, no enlisted man with 21 or more months of honorable service since September 16, 1940, will be sent oversas for permanent duty.

The exceptions are those who are graduates of the Military Intelligence Language School, Regular Army enlisted men and volunteers for foreign duty.

Many Officers Included

Officers who have 33 or more months of honorable service, or 30 months in the case of Medical Department officers, likewise will not be sent overseas for permanent assignment. This will not apply to Reserve officers who have chosen to remain on active duty, to regular Army officers or to those classed as scarce specialists.

The scarce specialists include Military Government officers, contract termination and property disposal officers, renegotiation officers, legal officers with admiralty law experience, highway traffic engineer officers, and officers classified as superintendent of water division in Transportation Corps.

Officer graduates of the Military Intelligence Language School at Fort Snelling, Minn., also are subject to overseas service if they are not eligible for separation and have less than 39 months of service.

Army nurses will not be sent overseas if they have 12 points or are 30 years of age. No Wac officers are being sent on permanent assignment.

Meanwhile, Senator Revercomb (R., W. Va.) said yesterday that unless the Army and Navy quit drafting men "this week" Congress should proceed immediately to end Selective Service itself.

Revercomb, a member of the Senate Military Committee, told a reporter figures show that the draft—which took millions of men into service—can now roll to a dead stop without impairing occupation forces.

This comment was in amplification of a Senate speech in which he said the voluntary enlistment program is getting all the men the Army and Navy need. Revercomb added on the floor that unless the services act promptly, "there will be legislation offered."

Byrnes Sees Delay In Loan to British

Progress Achieved On Some Points, Secretary Says

By International News Service

Secretary of State Byrnes told newsmen yesterday that he anticipates delay in reaching a final agreement on the proposed American loan to Great Britain.

After attending a meeting of the negotiators for two hours, Byrnes said there was "no prospect of an immediate agreement." Progress, he said, has been made on some points under discussion.

Members of the House Ways and Means Committee said they were hopeful that the visit here of British Prime Minister Clement Attlee would break the log-jam which has held up action on legislation providing for future trade relations with the Philippines.

A strong controversy has developed in Congress over this matter. But the thing which is said to be holding it up is delay of the State Department in stating its position.

The State Department was reported to have sounded out the British on whether any special tariff concession which this country grants the Philippines would interfere with the fulfillment of concessions that Britain would make in return for a long-term rehabitation loan.

In one quarter it was stated that the British had informally indicated that they would not object to concessions to the Philippines so long as quotas were fixed on such concessions.

Congressional leaders said they heard that United States negotiators have suggested a five-billion-dollar loan to the British to run for 50 years and to bear no interest during the first five years and 2 per cent after that time.

Modification of the Empire preference system and the sterling bloc pool reportedly would be the concession which the British would be expected to make.

Double Intake

Car Strike Profitable To Cab Men

End of the streetcar and bus strike yesterday quickly doomed lush fares for taxi drivers and at the same time put working girls' budgets back on a normal basis.

Cab drivers doubled their normal daily $10 to $15 earnings, declared Lieut. Joe Harrington, D. C. hack inspector. He added that for the first time in weeks not one complaint of overcharging was received at his office.

"As soon as the strike began we told all cabbies to get on the streets," he said. "Then we gave them a stiff warning that any reported price overcharge would result in the immediate suspension of their licenses."

Harrington added that many drivers reported additional earnings from lavish tips doled out by grateful riders.

On the dark side were the persons who couldn't manage to get a free lift, and had to spend $1 to $2 of tight budgets to get to work on time.

"The first day I rode cabs. That cost me my lunch and movie money," one young Government employe said. "But I didn't like the idea of going hungry, so the next day I walked the 35 blocks. A lot of my friends got lifts, but I wasn't that lucky.

One young blonde beauty said she hated to sound "foolish," but she thought the strike had done her some good.

"I've been gaining weight something terrible," she confided "Yesterday I walked to work because I couldn't get a lift, and didn't have money for a cab. It took me so long to walk that I didn't have time for breakfast, and I think I lost a pound. Maybe I'll keep this up."

spects was darker than in 1918 and 1919.

"There is none of that confidence now among men that they and their children will never again see another world war, as there was undoubtedly in 1919," Churchill declared. "It is our duty to supply the solid ground on which this hope that the United Nations Or-

Bevin disagreed with Churchill on the future outlook, expressing hope that the United Nations organization would be able to maintain peace.

The Foreign Secretary declared that the great difficulty in achieving international cooperation rests in whether or not you can entirely obliterate what are called spheres of influence and power politics.

"Sometimes," he said, "in these negotiations—I make the confession, power politics seems to me to be naked and unashamed."

He appealed to the world's great powers to "put their cards on the table face upward" in an effort to establish international peace.

"We are ready to do it," he emphasized.

Then referring to territorial demands, presumably those of Russia, he said:

"We have met territorially almost every demand that we ever thought we should be asked. At Moscow, Yalta and all the rest of the conferences, no one dreamed there would be further territorial demands, except here or there—in the (Dardanelles straits, etc."

Having conceded all this "and not taking one inch of territory or asking for it," he said, it was inevitable that the British government should be suspicious if new demands are presented.

Irked by Report

Bevin, obviously irked over repeated protests from Moscow over formation of a so-called "Western bloc," said "I am a little resentful and I think the House will agree I am entitled to be."

He said Britain's relations with France, Holland, Belgium, Scandinavia and other countries did not constitute "a Western bloc for all purposes."

"But," he added, "they are our cultural friends. They are our historical associates. They acknowledge the same democracy as we do. Therefore, I say I am entitled on behalf of the government to have good neighbors in my street just as any other country is entitled to have good neighbors in its street."

He added, however, that "we will take no step, we will do nothing nor allow any of our diplomats or agents to do anything to stir up hatred or to provoke a situation detrimental to Russia in the Eastern countries."

Bevin discounted the possibility that atomic energy could be developed for industrial use without "long, weary, hard and patient work."

"That encourages me to believe that it will give us time to build up the United Nations Organization for peace efforts and that, as it evolves for industry, the necessity for its use for the atomic bomb will disappear."

Churchill Gives Views

Churchill submitted what he described as a few simple points:

"First of all we should fortify in every way our special and friendly connections with the United States, aiming always at a fruitful association for the purpose of common protection and world peace.

"This association should in no way have a point against any other country, great or small, in the world, but should on the contrary be used to try to lead the victorious powers ever more closely together on equal terms and in all good faith and good will.

"That we should not abandon our special relationship with the United States and Canada about the atomic bomb and that we should aid the United States to guard this weapon as a sacred trust for the maintenance of peace.

"That we should seek constantly to promote and strengthen the world organization of the United Nations so that in due course it may eventually be fitted to become the safe repository of this great energy.

"I think this is agreed, we should make atomic bombs ourselves and have them here, even if manufactured elsewhere, in suitable safe storage with the least possible delay."

Shansi Province. (The central government admitted loss of several towns west of the railroad but said it had beaten off more than 30 attacks on the railway itself in four days.)

4. Large Communist reinforcements are pouring into Suiyuan Province, and surrender of many of the 70,000 Nationalists along the Peiping-Hankow Railroad brought the Reds new weapons. Most troops of the Nationalist Thirtieth and Fortieth Armies yielded with their arms, Reds said.

The government claimed:

1. Communists had breached dikes and flooded hundreds of square miles near the highway junction of Taikang in eastern Honan Province.

2. Communists' operations west of Kweisui have left 100,000 Chinese homeless; the Reds, said Nationalist Gen. Fu Tso-yi, have burned villages in all directions around Kweisui, as well as destroyed most of the Ueiping-Suiyan railroad between Paotow (west of Kweisui) and Tatung (east of Kweisui).

3. Communists are planning a drive on Taiyuan, capital of Shansi Province (east and south of Suiyuan) if they capture the Suiyuan capital, Kweisui.

Communist headquarters at Yenan meanwhile made no reply to the government's week-old peace proposals—a fact viewed here as ominous.

The central government through a spokesman offered only a terse "no comment" on whether Russia has agreed to permit Nationalist troops to land at the Manchurian ports of Dairen and Port Arthur, to replace Russian occupation forces in Manchuria. Seaborne landings would be the government's only recourse if overland routes to the north are cut.

Dasch asserted he came to Washington for the deliberate purpose of surrendering. He told of first telephoning the FBI in New York that he had just come across from Germany in a submarine. Dasch said he told the FBI:

"I, Franz Daniel Posterius, shall try to get in contact with your Washington office this coming week, either on Thursday or Friday. You should notify the Washington office of this fact."

When asked how he could be identified, Dasch said he replied:

"I'm about 40 years old and a little grey in the temples."

On reaching Washington, Dasch said he contacted a waiter who advised him to surrender to J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI, to Attorney General Francis Biddle or to the Army's military intelligence.

Phoned War Department

Dasch said he telephoned the War Department and was given the name of a "Colonel Cramer in military intelligence." He said he tried to reach Cramer who was out of his office. Then he gave the following description of a telephone call to the FBI, speaking to Agent Duane Traynor:

"This is George Davis. I'm registered at the Mayower. I am the leader of a group of eight men who have just come over from Germany and I want to talk to somebody about sabotage in this country."

He said Traynor replied: "You can talk to me. I'm a special agent of the FBI."

Dasch said he added: "I'd like an appointment to see you. I've just taken a shower and I have to dress and then I'll be ready to see you."

He quoted Traynor as suggesting an 11 a. m. appointment at the FBI's Washington office.

"That's alrgiht," Dasch said he replied, "but I may have trouble finding your office. You know I'm not familiar with the streets here in Washington."

Offered to Send Agent

"In that case," Dasch quoted Traynor as saying, "I'll send an agent up there for you an dhe will bring you down to my office." ffi

"That's fine," Dasch said he responded. "But one minute—I have telephoned Colonel Cramer in the Provost Marshal's office and he wasn't in so I left my name and number for him to call me back. Suppose he calls me before your agent gets here. Will it be alright for me to talk to him?"

He said Traynor replied: "I see no harm in that. But you can tell him that an agent is on his way to your room to bring you down to the bureau."

"All right," Dasch replied. "I'll be waiting here."

The records disclosed that a group of agents visited Dasch in his Mayflower Hotel room and questioned him in relays from June 19 until June 25 when he was taken to FBI headquarters and questioned further until July 2.

Trial Record Made Public

The Attorney General made public the complete record of the saboteur trials.

This disclosed Dasch's personal version of how his group of four saboteurs landed on Long Island shortly after midnight on the morning of June 13 from a German submarine. They were under Nazi orders to kill anybody they met on the beach and "send his body back to the submarine." They actually ran into a Coast Guardsman, who thought they were illegal fishermen. Here is Dasch's story of that meeting:

"I went up to him and said: 'I know we did something unlawful. We disobeyed the law but undoubtedly it can be straightened out and you will forget it if I take care of you.' He said, 'No, I can't do that,' and I said, 'Boy, you wish to live, don't you? You have a father and a mother home. You have done your duty. I now tell you that you will be doing your duty by accepting this money I am going to give you, and you wil lhear from me in Washington. What is your name, boy?'" ffi

Finally Accepted Money

"He said 'Frank Collins.' I said, 'My name is George Davis and you wil lhear from me in Washington, D. C.' He said, 'Yes, Sir, now please get away from this beach.' and I gave him $300 and I asked him what he was going to do with this money. He told me he would put some in the bank and give some to his mother and then have a good time on some.

"I gave him a little over $200 and walked over to him to be sure he was given free passage and I said, 'Kindly put your flashlight on the money I gave you and let me see how much I have given you.' I think it was $200 or $230 and I got out my pouch and gave him an additional sum to make $300. There were three or four $50 bills, some $20 bills and some $10 bills."

When pressed as to whether he did give Collins $300, Dasch replied:

"Yes, I counted it out in front of the little fellow and I gave him $300 and to my way of reasoning I knew that I had helped by my action to take a good loyal son and make a criminal out of him.

"I shall do everything in my power, even at the expense of additional punishment to clarify this boy and the way I approached him he believed that I was an official in Washington. I had him buffaloed in other words. I still don't think that the boy is a bad guy."

which resulted in the truce agreement was called through the joint efforts of Representative Randolph and Warren.

Urged To Act By Truman

Randolph told Walter H. Van Stavern and William F. Simms, president of the Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes Union, that President Truman had urged him to "step in and help end the dispute that had seriously impeded the movement of vitally needed Government employes."

The company was represented at the conference by Merrill, Samuel Emmons, transportation manager and J. Edward Heberle, vice president and controller of the company.

Besides Can Stavern and Simms, the union was represented by Sam Berrong, secretary-treasurer of the International Union, Walter Bierwagen and R. E. Hanna. Government officials present were Commissioners O'Connell, Warren, Goodrick and James J. Spillane.

When the union negotiating committee first announced the truce proposal to the mass meeting strikers appeared to accept it placidly—but not for long.

See-Saw of Sentiment

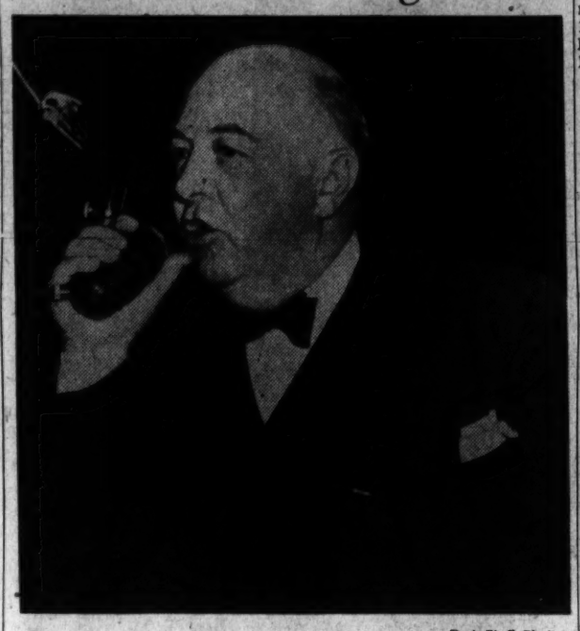

Robust sentiment see-sawed back and forth, seasoned by resounding shouts from both sides until the tide swept toward the group fighting for the support of their negotiating committee.

When the hubub had settled down and men had started to file out of the Arena back to their jobs, Berrong told local union leaders that "I want to congratulate you on your decision.

"I happen to know that if you hadn't decided to go back to work, the Army was prepared to take over at 2 o'clock," he added.

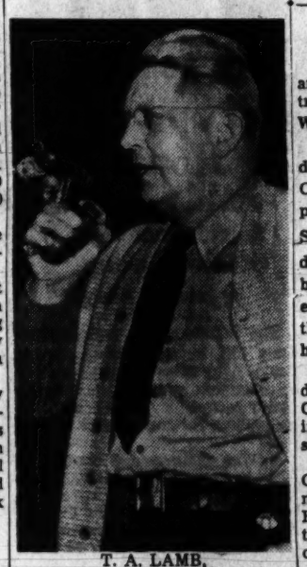

The walkout began at 2:30 Tuesday morning at a "continuous meeting" called the previous midnight.

man accused the committee by name of "damaging delay" in reporting out a bill. House leaders had gone to work in an effort to get action this session, serving informal notice that there will be no recess until the key measure is disposed of.

After a wrathy round, in which two members proposed tabling action, Representative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.) offered the postponement motion. Gossett moved for appointment of the five-man drafting group, but stipulated that it not report back unil after January 1.

Representative John J. Cochran (D., Mo.) promptly offered the substitute motion that was finally approved. The Cochran motion, adopted 8 to 7, placed no restrictions on the subcommittee as to when it would report back.

House Expenditures Chairman Carter Manasco (D., Ala.) named chairman of the subcommittee, said the drafting group will go to work right away but would hazard no forecasts on when it will report.

Was Military Move

Byrnes said that the original decision to send the troops into China was purely military and not political. He said he assumed that State Department representatives dealing with Chinese affairs had been advised but that it was not even called to his attention when the Marines were sent to assist in handling the Japanese surrender.

Byrnes said he could not say definitely whether the Chinese Central Government is still receiving any sort of lend-lease assistance.

He had been asked whether the Chinese are still getting arms and munitions from the United States. He said that he saw no reason why they shouldn't receive aid if anyone did but he just didn't know.

regard as a "war fo nerves" against Turkey. Last March the Soviet Union announced its decision not to renew the 1925 treaty of nonaggression with Turkey which expired yesterday. Since then there have been reports that Russia not only was demanding revision of the Montreux Convention, but insisting on the return of Russia of the districts of Kars and Ardahan, which were ceded to Turkey by treaty in 1921.

Last week the Turkish President, Ismet Inonu, told the National Assembly that Turkey had no debts to pay to anybody, and added that "we will live as men of honor and die as men of honor."

Secretary Byrnes, in announcing yesterday the American proposal for revising the Montreux Convention, said that the United States would be willing to be a signatory in the future.

dustry, either agreeing to creat it themselves as a labor-management agency, or jointly recommending legislation to establish it as a Government body.

Schwellenbach hinted possible agreement by both labor and management on some legislation. He told Congressmen that when he and the President were considering calling the conference, they determined to leave all problems, including legislation, to labor and industry. Thus, he argued, if the conference saw fit to recommend legislation, it would be the sort that both sides agreed to, and would therefore have better chance of success than laws imposed by the outside agency of Government.

"If we can work this out and get a program to Congress this way," he said, "it is infinitely better than you gentlemen working out something which would be opposed perhaps by both labor and management."

Innocuous Suggestion

Murray's reoslution on the wage problem was felt by some observers yesterday as being so innocuous that the conference might find it difficult not to accept it.

It contained, however, a clause the advocacy of which by the conference would considerably aid the CIO's wage drive. This was the proposition that "the framework" for collective bargaining on wages was to be found in President Truman's wage-price policy speech of 10 days ago, in which the Chief Executive called for "substantially" higher pay rates.

Murray's Resolution

Murray asked that the executive committee recommend to the conference adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, that recognition must be given to the fact that collective bargaining between labor unions and representatives of management in many important situations throughout the country has broken down over the important issue of wages, which has created a very serious crisis for the nation;

"The representatives of labor and management assembled in this conference do hereby make an urgent call upon the labor unions and representatives of management to engage in genuine and sincere collective bargaining in an effort to resolve this all-important wage issue.

"The framework for such collective bargaining has been provided by the President in his recent message to the Nation, in which he stated that 'wage increases are therefore imperative—to cushion the shock to our workers, to sustain adequate purchasing power and to raise the national income'."

Management Opposed

The resolution was submitted at the conclusion of the committee's first meeting, and aside from a speech on it by Murray, there was no discussion of it and no time set for its consideration.

In general, the management delegates are opposed to consideration of the wage problem by the conference, and William Green, AFL president, has declared that injection of the wage issue would make failure of the conference "a foregone conclusion."

It was not clear yesterday whether a simple majority of the executive committee, or a three-fourths vote, would be necessary to bring a report to the floor of the conference. George W. Taylor, conference secretary, said it was his "understanding" that agreement by three fourths of the members was required.

In other action yesterday, the executive committee made plans for setting up a "public hearings" body which would listen to proposals and points of view from individuals and organizations not represented at the conference. The committee will consist of three members, all prominent public citizens and not themselves conference members. Their names, the times of hearings, scope of subject matter and rules on who will be heard are expected to be announced today.

Meantime, the remainder of the conference began the work of getting into operation the six committees set up to deal with specific problems on the conference agenda, for the most part procedural issues directed at minimizing industrial disputes.

Tangible results from these groups are not expected to emerge for several days. In the interim, no full meeting of the conference have been scheduled.

LARSEN

nel Larson suffered a second attack and then yesterday morning a third one which was fatal.

Colonel Larson had seen considerable service in this war. He went into the Aleutians to meet the Japanese invasion threat and then led his regiment into the South Pacific for action at Tarawa, Kwajalein and in the Marshall Islands.

Guest of Bullis School Head

In February, 1944, he was ordered to Marine Corps headquarters here. Until last October, he made his home at 1201 Kingswood dr., Takoma Park. After that he was a guest of William F. Bullis, president of the Bullis School, Silver Spring.

With Colonel Larson at the time of his death was his wife, the former Margaret M. Ross, of Long Beach, Cal.

In the minds of thousands of Navy plebes of the future, the legend of the tall, erect Marine colonel with the close-cropped gray hair will recall the famed "Larson Luck."

For in three years as a player and three years as a coach, his Navy teams never boved to Army, traditional football foe of the Midshipmen.

In 1939, 1940 and 1941 Larson-coached Navy teams defeated Army by scores of 10-0, 14-0 and 14-6.

But in that last year, Colonel Larson saw a bigger and more important game ahead.

"Last for Quite Awhile"

On that afternoon of November 29, 1941, after watching his Navy team defeat Army for the third straight year in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, Colonel Larson told his boys:

"This will be the last football for me for quite awhile. There's a bigger game coming up and I'm going to be in it."

Jap planes roared over Pearl Harbor eight days later.

Within a month of the attack, Colonel Larson was off to the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., for duty and instruction in the command course.

A native of Monticello, Minn., Colonel Larson enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1917 and was discharged in June, 1918, to become a midshipman.

He played on three Navy football teams. All of them defeated Army. In 1921, he was captain of the team and was named on Walter Camp's second All-American team.

Nor did Colonel Larson shine in football alone while a midshipman. He was named on the first All-American lacrosse team and when he graduated in 1922 received the Thompson Trophy Cup as Navy's outstanding athlete.

Coached in Hawaii

Commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, he played with the All-Marine eleven at Quantico three years and the next two coached and played with the Parris Island Marines. In 1927 he coached the All-Navy team in Hawaii and the following season, during his spare time, was line coach at the University of Hawaii.

Then came two years in Nicaragua and he returned to Parris Island as football coach in 1931. Colonel Larson led the USS Pennsylvania team to the fleet championship in 1935 and 1936 and coached the Sixth Marines in Shanghai in 1937. His reputation and his football writings by this time had gained him a wide reputation and he was recalled to Annapolis in 1939 as head coach.

In his three years at Annapolis, Colonel Larson's teams won 16 games, lost 8 and were tied 3 times.

Colonel Larson is survived by his wife and four children, the three oldest of whom are by his first wife who died in 1935.

They are Emery E. Larson, Jr., 21, a former Yale student who is now a Marine Corps captain; Theodore Larson, 18, a plebe at the Naval Avademy; Mary Larson, 15, and Mercedes Larson, 7.

Colonel Larson's wife announced in Atlanta that funeral services and burial will be in Washington.

Civil Service Group Faces Tough Decision

PROBLEM: The Senate Civil Service Committee was given a perplexing problem to solve. Briefly it is: To what extent is it in the interest of good administration and economy to raise the salaries of able people in the higher brackets to keep them in Government jobs? Or, stated in another way, is it economical to pay a top-drawer expert $12,000 or $15,000 to do a job where the Government stands to make or lose millions of dollars by his decisions, or to pay an untried man $8000 or $9000 and take the chance of his acting in the best interest of the Government? Or, still another way: Should Government be a training ground for industry to pick and choose its best people at substantially higher salaries, or should Congress follow the President's suggestion and raise salaries up and down the line in an effort to hold them?

KLUTTZ

In effect, these were the questions shot to the committee yesterday by Attorney General Clark, Agriculture Secretary Anderson and Federal Works Administrator Fleming. From the response, it was obvious that Chairman Downey and Senators Taylor and Hicklenlooper were impressed, while Senator Langer, who enthusiastically supports more money for low-salaried employes, appeared unconvinced that the salaries of Federal judges, officials and members of Congress should be increased to the extent proposed by the President. Each of the three officials said they were daily losing some of their best people to industry, and that adequate replacements were just about impossible to hire. They agreed that it was becoming more difficult to keep a good top-staff organization together and they blamed this on one condition—the low Federal salary scale.

JUSTICE: Attorney General Clark revealed he had received the refusal of a top-notch lawyer early yesterday to accept a Federal judgeship, the fifth such turndown since July 1 when he joined the Cabinet. He cited the fact that two members of the Court of Appeals here had resigned to make money in industry. He said he was in the midst of trying to persuade two of his best district attorneys to stay on the job. The salaries of judges and district attorneys, he said, were "miserable." Clark told the committee he didn't have the heart to enforce his ban against U. S. attorneys engaging in private practice until the Congress raised their salaries to a livable level. "You'll get a better return for your dollar," he counseled the committee, "if you vote to raise salaries."

AGRICULTURE: Secretary Anderson said the most discouraging aspect of his job was his inability to hold good people to their jobs. He cited the cases of Eugene Auchter, Richard Maycock and David Meeker—all able men—who had left his department after years of services to the greener financial pastures of industry. He said Tom Stitt, his milk expert, and others on his staff, could walk out of Government today into much better paying jobs. He said he was begging and pleading with them to stay. Anderson pointed to the vast responsibilities of Federal officials. As an example, he cited the fact that his Commodity Credit Corporation has an inventory of foods and grain valued at $1,250,000,000 yet he can pay the official in charge only a third of the salary the Marshall Field department store pays its man to keep tab on its mere 20 million dollars inventory. He said bad handling of its potato surplus problem could cost the Government from 15 to 25 million dollars, and that he should be able to pay a good man a decent salary to handle that job.

TVA: General Fleming came out for the pay bill in strong and effective language. He said in part: "They (Federal workers) are notoriously underpaid, especially in the more important positions. The only reward on this earth they can look forward to after wearing themselves out is to be turned out to grass in their old age on a modest pension. We cannot expect men of ability to devote their lives to public service and accept their quota of the irresponsible abuse daily heaped by the unthinking upon 'bureaucrats' on the salaries now being paid . . . We cannot command the best intelligenee of the country, or if we do attract it, we can't hold it. The few devoted souls who do remain year after year in their frayed coats and threadbare trousers, putting the public service above service to self, are the exceptions that prove the rule . . . We are unable to attract the cream of the college graduating classes. It is generally the man in the lower half of his graduating class who turns to Government."

BIG BUSINESS: The Senators were reminded again and again that the Federal Government is the biggest and the most important of businesses and that it must have competent men to operate it. In response to a question by Senator Byrd, General Fleming said his Public Roads Administration and Public Buildings Administration would need to increase their staffs. However, his community facilities projects will be wound up. Secretary Anderson said he hadn't cut personnel as much as he had hoped and that the postwar period had brought new problems to his department.

Prison Guard Ejected Him, Carwile Says

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Attorney Howard H. Carwile said today he was forcibly ejected from the State Penitentiary yesterday when he went there to see a client confined in the hospital, less than 24 hours after Governor Darden had said Carwile could see his client immediately.

After he left the penitentiary, Carwile said he went immediately to Governor Darden who reiterated his previous statement that the attorney had a right to see his client and promised him: (1) You will see your client; (2) you will see him in privacy; (3) you will have protection while seeing him.

Inquiry Promised

The Governor has promised a full investigation of charges made by a sister of Carwile's client, Edward I. Wall, that inmates at the penitentiary have been brutally treated and neglected. The charges, at the same time, were denied yesterday by Maj. Rice M. Youell, commissioner of corrections.

The attorney said he went to the penitentiary yesterday to interview Wall and was told by a guard he could not see his client unless there was written permission from the Governor. Carwile said he told the guard he could deliver the message to the Governor and at that point, he said, the guard captain grabbed both his arms and forcibly ejected him through the prison gates.

Jail Officer's Story

Maj. W. Frank Smyth, jr., superintendent of the penitentiary, said today the guard was J. Sam Smith. The superintendent said Carwile had been told by penitentiary officials he could see his client when the doctors were through examining the man.

The examination was completed yesterday morning and Major Smyth had intended to give instructions, he said, that Carwile could see Wall. However, he went out to vote and failed to leave the orders. In his absence, the attorney arrived, the superintendent said.

3 Men Indicted On Rape Charges In Va. County

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—Three men, one an escaped convict recently recaptured, were indicted on charges of rape by a King George County Circuit Court grand jury yesterday.

Willie H. Dillon, 36, allegedly criminally assaulted his 12-year-old stepdaughter on July 4 on an isolated road. He will be tried November 15.

A true bill was returned against Walter Crawford, 24, Negro, for assaulting a 20-year-old Negro girl the night of August 25 near Owens, after knocking her escort unconscious. Crawford, a former Dahlgren Naval Proving Ground employe, will be tried November 27.

Robert Pretlow is alleged to have criminally attacked a 70-year-old Negro woman at her home. He was a trusty working with a convict road gang and went to the house to get water. He escaped from a truck returning the prisoners to camp later in the day after the woman reportedly identified him as her assailant. He was recaptured in Baltimore after weeks of freedom.

Pretlow will be tried upon completing his prison term.

Stafford to Study New High School

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—The completion of a committee of five persons, representing as many organizations, has paved the way for a survey to determine whether the people of Stafford County want a consolidated high school.

Following receipt of a proposal for the school, which would combine the two existing high schools, the board of supervisors asked for a study of the matter. The committee named consists of Mrs. R. H. L. Chichester, Falmouth High School League; G. S. Berry, board of supervisors; Perry A. Thompson, Ruritan Club; Delegate Frank P. Moncure, Stafford High School League, and Frank Tullos, school board.

In addition to the survey, the committee will study recommendations of State experts and observe successful schools in other States. Its report is to be made in January.

Charlottesville Group To Name 'First Lady'

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—"First Lady of the Year" for Charlottesville will be named at a banquet in the Monticello Hotel tomorrow night by a committee of secret nominators composed of local civic leaders.

The event, spnsored by the city chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, business girls sorority, will be climaxed by the presentation of a plaque to the First Lady.

Sergt. Marshall Resigns As Manassas Policeman

Manassas, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—The resignation of Sergt. C. H. Marshall, who has served on the Manassas police force for the past 16 years, has been accepted by the town council. Sergeant Marshall resigned because of illness. A former serviceman, Dewey R. Castle, has been obtained to serve as a town policeman, Hunton Tiffany, town manager of Manassas, announces.

'Battle of Potomac' Looms

Virginia to Increase Patrol In War on Oyster Poachers

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Governor Darden and Charles M. Lankford, State commissioner of fisheries, meeting with a delegation of some 30 oyster planters from the tidewater area, today agreed to furnish additional protection against poachers and, with the concurrence of the group, to submit a bill to the next session of the General Assembly proposing increased rentals of State-owned beds to take care of additional expenses incurred.

The Fisheries Commission will put extra patrol boats into the Potomac and Rappahannock Rivers in an effort to curb the activities of oyster dredgers, who operate at night and were said by members of the delegation to have "ruined the chances of small planters' making a living."

It was pointed out that Maryland, as well as Virginia, has partial control over the Potomac and that any legislation affecting the river's oyster beds must be agreed upon by the two States.

Today's meeting was a continuance of a long-time war waged by oyster planters against poachers who use the illegal dredging machines attached to power boats. R. D. McFadon of Westmoreland County, one of the leaders of the delegation, traced the history of oystering from the time dredges were used by sailboats. Later, he said, these proved impractical and most oysters were caught by small-time tongers. Now most boats, while carrying a patent tong rig, also have dredges attached to their motors.

These nighttime dredgers, McFadon stated, "have ruined the river" by depleting oyster beds, "have ruined the chances of making a living for small time planters and will make oyster planting unprofitable" if they are allowed to continue.

When the Governor suggested raising rentals on the 75,000 acres now leased out by the State at $1 annually, the planters readily agreed. One said rentals had been set at that figure many years ago and that since that time oyster prices have risen tremendously, also that elimination of the raiders would more than make up for the increase in savings to planters. Lankford said that a price of $1.50 per acre should bring in what revenue would be needed. Patrol boats cost about $5000 and the increase would mean between $35,000 and $40,000 to be used for protection.

The importance of public sentiment was stressed by the fisheries commissioner, who said opinion was for protection in the Rappahannock, but against it in the Potomac.

Today's delegation was led by McFadon and Dr. C. Y. Griffith of Westmoreland, Godfrey Smith and Charles Lewis of Richmond County, Fred Garrett of Essex and John Garland Pollard jr., son of the late Governor, of Lancaster.

350 Veterans Are Enrolled At U. of Va.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—Registration at the University of Virginia for the new semester, now virtually completed, shows that the number of veterans enrolled last semester has been tripled and the total of all students increased by 500, the registrar's office revealed today.

About 350 veterans, of whom nearly a third are married, have enrolled to date, according to Dr. J. N. G. Finley, dean of counselling. The majority of these are not freshmen, but are advanced students who have taken previous college training at the Universtiy of Virginia or other schools.

Although the university's total enrollment will run more than 1825, it is still about 1000 students short of the average pre-war registration. However, it is 500 more than the last previous enrollment, held four months ago under the accelerated program on which the university is still operating.

The university had its peak enrollment of 3000 students in 1939, and the average peacetime registration was around 2900. With the inauguration of its building program and return to normal conditions, the university anticipates a gradual increase in the student body.

Of the veterans, the majority have seen overseas service and some have disabilities due to service wounds.

Housing has been a grave problem for the veterans and of the little more than a hundred married couples about 80 have found residences so far, Mr. Finley reported. Greatest difficulty, he said, is that there are not enough low priced apartments and rooms to satisfy the demand.

Bandit Pair Hunted In Foxville Holdup

Frederick, Md., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—Two armed men, believed responsible for a series of robberies in and around Hagerstown, held up D. V. Wolfe, proprietor of a general store at Foxville, Monday night and fled with about $55 in cash. Wolfe said one man walked into the store at Foxville, Monday night kerchief and brandishing a pistol. His companion shoved a rifle through a window of the store, covering two patrons. After the holdup the bandits headed in the direction of Smithsburg, Wolfe said.

Wig Infects Eye

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 7.—Miss Betty Boyer of Kableton, near here is suffering from a badly infected eye caused, according to her physician, by a hair from a Halloween wig she was wearing on the holiday getting imbedded in the eye.

Police Chief Curtis Dies In Hampton

Hampton, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Henry S. Curtis, police chief of Hampton for the last 17 years and a law enforcement officer for more than four decades, died this morning in a local hospital where he underwent an emergency operation Saturday.

Curtis, 62, had been in poor health for three years.

In point of service, he was one of the oldest law enforcement officers in eastern Virginia. He entered police work when he was 21 years old and had served continuously since.

Joining the Hampton division of police as a patrolman, Curtis worked his way up through the ranks. He was elevated from detective sergeant to chief of police in 1928.

Surviving are his widow, a daughter, Mrs. C. B. Edwards of Denver, Colo., and a son, Corpl. Henry M. Curtis of the U. S. Army, now in Germany.

Paul K. Taylor

Culpepper, Va., Nov. 7.—Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from his residence near town for Paul Kenenth Taylor, who died on Saturday in University of Virginia Hospital from injuries received a week ago in a motorcycle-truck collision on the Culpeper-Madison road. The accident occurred on October 28, when Howard John Taylor, who had just received his discharge from the Army, and his brother, Paul, were riding a motorcycle. Howard was killed instantly.

Mrs. C. R. McMurdo

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 7.—Burial rites for Mrs. Caryanne Randolph McMurdo, who died in Petersburg, were held this afternoon in the Jefferson graveyard at Monticello following the funeral at 10 o'clock this morning at the home of her sisters, Misses Mary and Sallie Ruffin, in Petersburg. Besides her husband, Robert M. McMurdo, she is survived by one son, R. M. McMurdo, jr., United States Navy, now stationed in Washington, and three daughters.

John Syster

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 7.—John Syster, 39, employe of a barber shop here, died in a local hospital yesterday of injuries sustained Saturday evening when he was struck by an automobile in the near-downtown section while he was leaning against another double-parked car talking to a friend. The body was taken to Williamsport, Md., for services.

City's Blanket Taxing Power Is Criticized

Baltimore, Nov. 7 (AP).—The Commission on Governmental Efficiency and Economy declared today that use by the City of Baltimore of the blanket taxing authority granted it by the Legislature is not "necessary wise" and advised instead a "cut and save" policy.

The commission presented figures to show that four million dollars could be added to the current city budget without increasing real estate taxes or "without relying upon the doubtful expediency of additional revenue from new tax devices."

Must Economize

The "cut and save" policy is "the city's only course of action for sound solution of the 1946 budget problem," the commission said in its bulletin, adding:

"This is because hurried legislation by the City Council likely would necessitate an experimental setup of administrative and collection procedure in the attempt to produce the additional revenues needed for the 1946 budget period which begins on January 1.

"Not only would the machinery for such a new setup be untried by the city, but also the procedure and regulatory aspects, so hurriedly devised and without legal test by the courts, very likely would not provide adequate safeguards against administrative loopholes and possible means of tax evasion."

Faces Big Deficit

The commission proposed adding to the city real estate tax, now $2.89 per $100 valuation, the 2 cents deducted from the State's 1945 tax on real estate—thus avoiding changing the total rate of $3.01.

City officials have said Baltimore faced a six-million-dollar budget deficit for 1946. The special session of the Maryland General Assembly on Monday was called primarily to afford relief for the city. At the session, a measure giving the city general taxing powers for two years was enacted.

Wife Threatener Disarmed, Jailed By Five Officers

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 7 (AP).—Ward Leasure, 53, was lodged in the Allegany County jail today on a charge of assault with intent to kill his wife, State Trooper Blair J. Buckel reported.

Deputy sheriffs Glenn Rizer and Edward Muir went to serve the warrant obtained by the wife and reported Leasure stood on the front porch of his farm home with a shotgun and defied officers to take him. They returned to Cumberland and secured three State policemen for assistance.

While First Sergt. John H. Doud talked to Leasure, Buckel worked his way to the rear of the house, entered to window and reached out through the door to seize Leasure around the neck. He was disarmed, handcuffed and taken to jail.

Polite Baltimore Leaves Carrier Intact on Visit

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—The carrier Randolph had "exactly the opposite experience" to that of the Missouri, which was stripped by souvenir hunters in New York Navy Day, Capt. J. R. Tate, the former's commanding officer, said tonight on that ship's return to Norfolk.

In Baltimore for Navy Day exercises the Randolph had 70,000 visitors between October 26 and 29, her captain stated, adding "perhaps the people of Baltimore have not heard of souvenir collecting—or again perhaps they have been better educated in the finer nuances of being a guest . . ."

Veteran Accused Of Shooting Wife

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—A warrant charging John C. Powers, 24-year-old Air Forces veteran, with felonious assault with intent to kill his wife was served on Powers today at the hospital where he is recovering under guard from a wound in the side, Assistant Prosecutor Robert H. Boyd reported.

Mrs. Evangeline R. Powers, 20, was reported still "dangerously ill" of wounds in the right hand, right side and stomach. Her husband was resting comfortably. Prosecutor Clarence E. Martin, jr., said Powers shot his wife and then turned the gun on himself.

Soil Conservation Supervisors Named

Manassas, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Three unopposed candidates elected as supervisors of the northern Virginia soil conservation district in Tuesday's election were Lester W. Huff, Nokesville; Edward C. Norman, Leesburg, and Stuart T. DeBell, Centerville.

The conservation district consists of Prince William, Fairfax and Loudoun Counties. A certificate of organization was issued by the secretary of the Commonwealth in July of this year. The district is one of 22 now being operated by land owners from 82 Virginia counties.

The supervisors will serve for three years.

Tuck Is Next Va. Governor Despite Strong GOP Bid

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—William M. "Big Bill" Tuck, 49-year-old South Boston Democrat, is the next Governor of Virginia.

Tuck, present Lieutenant Governor and for more than 20 years leader in the dominant State Democratic organization headed by United States Senator Harry F. Byrd, won yesterday's election by a majority of over two to one in a contest with State Senator S. Floyd Landreth, Galax Republican, and Howard Carwile, Richmond independent. Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor and attorney general were also elected.

The Republicans, making their strongest bid for State offices in many years, polled the largest vote for Governor since 1929, when they formed a coalition with anti-Smith Democrats in an unsuccessful effort to defeat John Garland Pollard. While defeated soundly in the State-wide election they picked up three seats in the 100-member House of Delegates and will have six votes in that body when it convenes in January. They contested for 11 seats, winning in 4, while 2 Republican Delegates were unopposed.

Louderback Wins

Both Governor Darden and the Governor-elect were cheered by word that Charles Louderback of Stanley, chairman of the House appropriations committee and a veteran in the handling of the finance legislation, had won reelection in the Page-Warren District over A. Erwin Mackley, Republican, of Luray.

Meanwhile, Associated Press returns from 1544 of the State's 1716 precincts gave Tuck 106,357 votes to 49,491 for Landreth and 3986 for Howard Carwile, Richmond lawyer, who ran as an independent. In 1545 precincts Lewis Preston Collins, Marion Democrat, received 103,962 votes for lieutenant governor to 48,789 for Carl Marshall, Fairfax Republican, and Attorney General A. F. Staples, seeking reelection, received 101,500 to 50,252 for Lester S. Parson, Norfolk Republican.

Republican leaders attributed their heavy vote to the intensive campaign and discussion of questions of State by Senator Landreth and his running mates, which included 80 appearances on the Hustings by Landreth alone. Neither party, however was able to get to the polls more than a minor fraction of the voters who voted party tickets in the presidential election last fall.

Landreth will again serve in the State Senate, where the Republicans hold 2 of the 40 seats.

Button Wins Contest

In the legislative contest yesterday these results were shown:

Robert Y. Button, Culpeper Democrat, defeated H. C. Thompson, Democrat of Loudoun, for the Senate vacancy caused in the Loudoun-Culpeper-Rappahannock District by the death of Senator Thomas B. Glascock, while Brig. Gen. E. E. Goodwyn, organizer and commander of the State Guard was unopposed to succeed Senator Gorland Gray of Waverley, resigned.

R. C. Stokes, Covington, Democrat, defeated John F. Kiser, Republican, in the Alleghany-Clifton Forge district.

Other House Results

E. T. Ferguson, Democrat, was leading S. P. Stewart, 779 to 645, in returns from 28 of 33 precincts in Bedford County; D. French Slaughter, Democrat incumbent, won the Culpeper-Rappahannock House seat in a race with George Edmondson, jr., Republican; E. D. Coburn, Democrat incumbent, defeated E. L. Spangler, Independent, in the Bland-Giles district; Edwin Lynch, Democrat, won over A. K. Barta, Republican, in Fairfax; Hugh S. Calhoun, Republican, unseated Dr. R. C. Bowie, Democrat, in Grayson County; Mr. Spiers, Bedford Democrat, was returned after a race with Bentley Hite, Republican, in Montgomery-Radford district; Mr. Louderback, Page Democrat and chairman of the House Appropriations committee, appeared to be reelected in the Page-Warren district, receiving 1835 votes to Republican Erwin A. Hackley's 1370, with only four Page County precincts unreported; J. Leon Codd, Democrat, was elected in Portsmouth over four Democrat opponents. The Rockingham-Harrisonburg district, with two seats, elected James O. Stickley, Democrat, and George W. Taliaferro, Republican; Ryland Craft, Republican incumbent, defeated Tom B. Wolfe, Democrat, and C. C. Sluss, Independent, in Scott, and Ralph Lincoln, Republican, was elected from Smyth over Democrat Dr. George A. Wright.

Darden Still Silent

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Gov. Colgate Darden, jr., remained mum today on the question of whether or not he would be willing to accept an appointment to fill the senatorial shoes of Carter Glass, if Senator Glass should retire in January.

Tuck Thanks Voters, Asks Cooperation

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Governor Darden expressed his confidence in the newly elected State officers at his press conference today.

"I am tremendously pleased at the vote that was received by Democratic nominees" he said. "They are worthy of the trust that was placed in them, and I feel confident that the affairs of the State will prosper in their hands."

Gov. Elect William H. Tuck, deluged with letters and messages, including congratulations from his defeated Republican opponent, State Senator S. Floyd Landreth, issued this statement:

Sees Different Problems

"I realize that problems confronting the next administration will be difficult and unprecedented. I hope that all the people will share with me and with other State officials the responsibility of solving these problems to the best interests of all the people of Virginia. Along with these problems comes unequaled opportunity for advancement. Let us all cooperate to the end that these advancements may be made along the safe and sane pathway of betterment.

"Of course I am deeply grateful to my friends and to all Virginians for the honor they have bestowed upon he."

Senator Landreth wired the Governor-elect:

"Congratulations. I pledge you my best effort and cooperation in the solution of our common problems."

Governor-elect Tuck replied:

"I appreciate your congratulatory message. I am confident that we can work wholeheartedly together for the best interests of all the people of Virginia."

King Thanks Workers

Mayor W. Marshall King of Fredericksburg, who was Democratic campaign manager, thanked the thousands of party workers who helped in the campaign in the perfection of a party organization in each of 1716 precincts.

E. R. Combs, chief Byrd lieutenant and head of the State Compensation Commission, was most impressed, in his retrospect of the election, with relative increase in the size of the county vote and decrease in the cities. He noted, less happily, growth of Republican strength in the Sixth District where Roanoke, Roanoke County, Montgomery and Floyd Counties went Republican. Floyd voted heavily for the Republican nominee for Governor, but reelected Democrat John B. Spiers to the House of Delegates.

W. Va. Father of 10 Is Killed by Auto

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Louis Staubs, 52, of near Harpers Ferry, W. Va., died on the way to a Martinsburg Hospital last night after he was struck by an automobile while walking along a road at the northern end of Martinsburg.

Staubs is survived by his wife and ten children.

O'Conor Signs 7 Emergency Bills in Md.

Baltimore, Nov. 7 (AP).—Governor O'Conor and presiding officers of the legislative assembly signed into law today the seven measures enacted at Monday's extraordinary session of the legislature.

First on the list to which the Governor, Senate President James J. Lindsay (D., Balto. County) and House Speaker John S. White (D., Prince Georges) put their names was the emergency bill delegating general taxing powers to Baltimore City.

Other new legislative acts include:

Eliminating from the Unemployment Compensation Act a wartime clause which excluded certain employers from the benefits of the merit rating provisions.

Authorizing the city of Cumberland to promote a $250,000 bond issue for water works improvements.

Appropriating $12,000 to defray expenses of the special sessions.

Extending until June 1, 1947, a 20 per cent wartime bonus granted to municipal employes of Cumberland.

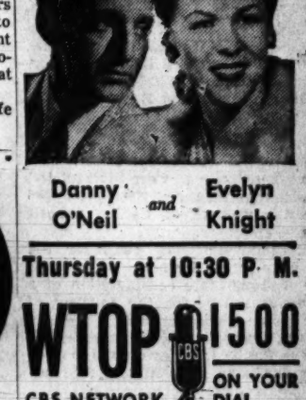

Authorizing sharpsburg to promote a $100,000 bond issue for construction of a water works and sewerage system.

Vesting in the State Board of Education authority to condemn lands at the site of the State Teachers Colleg in Frostburg.

Students Here Attend Retreat

More than 3000 Catholic students from 40 public senior and junior high schools attended retreats yesterday in 19 Catholic churches in the District and Montgomery County.

The retreats, scheduled to continue today, are under the auspices of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine of the Washington Archdiocese.

The transit strike reduced the attendance somewhat, according to the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, assistant pastor of Immaculate Conception Catholic Church and chairman of the retreat project.

Typical of the retreats was the one held at St. Paul's Church, 15th and V sts. nw., and attended by 50 students from nearby Central High School.

Father Gedra led the retreat at St. Paul's, opening with a celebration of mass and closing last night with benediction of the blessed sacrament.

Students participated in a conference on religious instruction, recited the rosary and litany, and took part in a "Way of the Cross" ritual.

Director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine for this area is Dr. Leo J. McCormick, archdiocesan superintendent of schools and former assistant pastor of St. Michael's Church, Silver Spring.

Col. Qualters Returns; Finds Father Dead

Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Qualters, the late President Roosevelt's personal bodyguard, returned to this country Tuesday morning after 34 months overseas duty to learn his father had died four hours before.

Maj. Qualters

News of the death of Richard Qualters, 70, in Boston, was transmitted to Colonel Qualters when he arrived at Hampton Roads, Va. A special plane brought him to Washington, where he picked up his wife, Arlene, and left by train on an emergency furlough for the funeral in Boston.

His mother, Ellen Qualters, died in August, 1944, while he was overseas. He has two sisters.

A former Notre Dame football player and Massachusetts State trooper, Qualters took military leave from the White House Secret Service force in May, 1942, to join the Army Air Forces.

His wife has been living with Judge and Mrs. Matthew M. McGuire, 2701 Connecticut ave. nw. The Qualters will live at the Dorchester House, 2480 16th st. nw., on their return from Boston.

TAXI

walkout plans were formulated shortly after the city was paralyzed by a walkout of Capital Transit Co. employes.

Union demands, basis for the strike threat, include:

1. Immediate consideration of a measure to limit the number of cabs on District streets.

2. Immediate consideration by the Public Utilities Commission of union zone revision and rate adjustment proposals.

3. Investigation of Board of Revocation and Review procedures and practices as related to cab drivers.

4. Compulsory liability insurance on all vehicles in the District.

5. Issuance to cab drivers of insurance stickers four at a time.

Representative Randolph, whose office was the first stop of the union delegation following a lengthy executive session on "the strike situation," issued the first announcement that walkout threat had been shelved.

John R. Peters, president of the rival United Taxicab Operators, now an independent union, but until last year affiliated with the CIO, said he was "indelibly opposed to a strike at this time."

"I don't approve of this business of holding a club over the head of the public," he declared.

Republicans Insist N. Y. Vote Has No National Importance

By the Associated Press

Democrats and Republicans analyzed Tuesday's municipal elections yesterday and found comfort in them for both major parties.

Republicans challenged Democratic assertion that Democrat William O'Dwyer's election as mayor of New York by a record-breaking plurality carried national or State political significance.

Detroit's slam-bang mayoralty race shared interest among politicians generally. Final unofficial returns showed Mayor Edward J. Jefferies, jr., to have been reelected by 57,518 over Richard T. Frankensteen, a CIO union official who had the indorsement of that organization's political action committee. Frankensteen lost his home precinct.

The two congressional races resulted as follows:

New Jersey Fourth District—Frank A. Mathews, jr. (R.).

Illinois Twenty-fourth — Roy Clippinger (R.).

The returns came in for brief debate in the House when Representative Bulwinkle (D., N. C.), citing election of Democrats in New York, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Boston, told Republicans:

"I know how you feel; it's pretty hard on you, but you have to take your medicine and you have to sit in sackcloth and ashes for a little while."

Representative Michener (R., Mich.) countered with the assertion that the New York City election was a victory for the American Labor Party "with the remnants of Tammany attached to it as a tail."

O'Dwyer had the support of the ALP as well as the Democratic organization. Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, his Dewey-supported Republican opponent, also wore the Liberal and Fusion labels. Newbold Morris ran third on a "No Deal" ticket backed by retiring Mayor LaGuardia.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey had no comment on the result.

Complete unofficial returns gave O'Dwyer 1,119,225 votes; Goldstein 434,050; Morris 399,437.

In Detroit, Jeffries and Frankensteen both deplored injection of racial and religious issues into the campaign there.

Said Jeffries: "This has been the most vicious, nasty campaign that I have ever witnessed. Racial and religious issues have been raised. . . . I have never subscribed to this type of campaign . . . I am a zealous disciple of tolerance not only in theory but in practice."

Frankensteen: "The closing and decisive days of the campaign were marked by the injection of racial, religious and class fears, which had no relationship to the actual issues involved. It is this, far more than the fact that I have been defeated which concerns me most. Neither Detroit nor the Nation can afford to be set against itself."

An amendment proposing construction of a huge underground parking space below Washington Boulevard in downtown Detroit was among half a dozen charter amendments and proposals approved by the voters.

600 Jamaicans Ending Md. Work

Baltimore, Nov. 7 (AP).—A wartime emergency farm labor experiment drew to an end this week as approximately 600 Jamaicans husked corn in narrow shock rows on Maryland farms already seeded to wheat.

The Jamaicans are the last of a foreign labor shipment, arranged by treaty by the United States, that included approximately 900 Bahamans and 1600 Jamaicans.

When they finish husking, the remaining wartime - imported farmers will return to camps to await the homeward voyage.

Renewal of the project, which has operated for three war years, appears "uncertain," said Paul E. Nystrom, State supervisor of the emergency farm labor program.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Streetcar and Bus Operators Welcomed as 'Lost Friends'

The public welcomed back streetcar and bus operators like lost friends yesterday.

"Boy, am I glad to see you again!" was the general comment from passengers, who quickly gathered on loading platforms when service was resumed.

The first streetcar to travel the Mount Pleasant line left the car barn at 14th and East Capitol sts. at 1:40 p. m., 40 minutes after the strike officially ended.

The driver's spirits were high. "It was just like having a vacation," he offered to the passengers at large.

Only two out of more than 70 passengers who boarded the streetcar between the car barn and Mount Pleasant st. nw., showed any indignation.

"Well, are you satisfied"? You certainly caused plenty of trouble. It was a pretty smart act," one elderly lady scolded at the driver, then took her seat to mutter to herself for several blocks.

The driver merely grinned. "Lady, we got to eat. They treat us right and we'll act right."

Another woman insisted, "It's the public who takes it on the chin. We always suffer."

The driver's answer to that was, "We don't want to cause the public trouble. We'll give the best service possible, if we get fair treatment."

Most of the men, who boarded the streetcar, leaned over confidentially to the operator and asked in low tones, "Did you get what you wanted."

The driver was quick to answer that negotiations were still open, but the strikers were convinced they would end up by getting the raise they asked for.

"We're glad. You fellows deserve it," one passenger said with a grin as he took his seat. Then he added, "But you sure did a terrible thing to us."

"Congratulations," said another.

If anyone was sheepish about the whole matter, it was the passengers and not the operator. Quite a few had nothing to say but they smiled embarrassedly as he looked them straight in the eye and dared them to bawl him out.

The first streetcar on the Mount Pleasant line started the return trip from Mount Pleasant st. nw., at 2:30 p. m. More than 40 cars were traveling the line within an hour after the first one left the car barn.

Each time a streetcar passed another headed the opposite way, the operators signaled "thumbs up" to indicate victory, clanged the streetcar's bell and waved merrily.

sands. After them came tanks and artillery and "Katusha," the famed Red Army weapono consisting of rocket launchers mounted on trucks.

After the armed forces came hundreds of thousands of civilians —workers and peasants—with banners proclaiming their love for the Soviet Union, their affection for Stalin and their determination to strive for Soviet goals.

Four hours later they were still marching and pouring into Red Square.

Prominent among the parade watchers was United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman—so far as known the last foreigner to talk to Stalin. Harriman visited the Soviet leader at Stalin's vacation villa at Sochi two weeks ago.

The cold finally proved too much for most of the diplomats and they broke ranks to buy hot dogs and buns sold on the edge of the square.

(In Washington, the White House said that Truman had sent a congratulatory message to Stalin.

The absence of any published messages from Truman and Byrnes caused immediate comment. Greetings from the late President Roosevelt and Former Secretary of State Hull in the past always were among the most prominently displayed messages.

Private Funds To Aid Parking Seen Unlikely

By James E. Chinn
Post Staff Writer.

Private enterprise will not help rescue the District from its auto parking troubles without definite assurance that free parking on the streets is to be abolished.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, sent that blunt warning yesterday to Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.), who has promised to break Washington's downtown bottleneck in 90 days.

"One of the essential conditions to prevent unjustified use of automobiles and to induce the maximum possible use of public transportation," wrote General Grant, "is to stop letting the automobile owner park on public property indefinitely without any payment to the public for that privilege. It will not be possible for private enterprise to undertake the construction or even the operation of parking garages without definite legislative assurance that this condition will be fulfilled."

10,000 Spaces, 200,000 Cars

Hebert, however, said that with only 10,000 curb spaces available in the central business area and more than 200,00 potential parkers, "there's no ned now to worry about how the private investor will make out."

"As a matter of fact," he declared, "a group of businesmen, without any assurance that free parking would be abolished, have offered to finance and operate garages under three parks in the congested section."

General Grant also took the position that no Federal official or employe should enjoy free parking facilities provided by the Government for their convenience. A fee should be fixed, he said, that would cover operating expenses and amortized the cost "'in a reasonable period of years."

He pointed out, however, that the pay-to-park plan probably would be unpopular, because a survey by the NCPPC back in 1930 revealed that 17,103 car owners out of 22,815 canvased, reported they would be unwilling to pay anything for storage space. The other 5712, he said, "indicated" they would be willing to pay somewhere between 5 and 50 cents.

35% U. S. Workers Own Cars

Other interesting disclosures of the 1930 survey cited by General Grant were that 35 per cent of Government workers owned automobiles and would presumably use free parking space, and that 41 per cent of the "buying power" in Washington used a car on shopping trips.

General Grant volunteered to draft legislation to put an end to free parking and urged favorable consideration of other suggestions for solving the parking problem:

1—Legislation requiring a "reasonable" amount of parking space, not exceeding provision for 20 per cent of all employes in a building, for all new Government buildings.

(Editor's note—A House-passed bill having the same purpose, is now awaiting action of the Senate District Committee.)

2—Legislation requiring parking space for buildings already built.

3. Legislation requiring establishment of parking facilities at the terminals of all major highways built with Federal aid-to-highways funds.

Provides for NCPFC Approval

4. Legislation requiring that all parking facilities provided with Federal funds be approved by the NCPFC.

For Hebert's efforts to break the parking jam, General Grant tossed in this verbal bouquet:

"Your interest in finding a solution now to the parking problem in the National Capital has brought much encouragement to those of us who have been struggling for years to get a reasonable solution to this problem."

Proposed Western Union Relay Towe

90-FOOT STRUCTURE — This tower, shown in architect's sketch, will be built in a business-zoned area on 41st st. near Wisconsin ave. as soon as the FCC approves of Western Union's plan to install it as a radio relay station. The District Commissioners already have given their approval of the $50,000 structure. Leon Chatelain, jr., 1727 K st. nw., is the architect

Hearse Trouble

Des Moines (AP).—That unwelcome subject—the hearse—was the first topic on which the Iowa Senate and House were unable to agree during the first of their three-month session. They differed as to how the vehicle should be licensed and when neither chamber would budge, a conference committee of both House and Senate was named to work out a compromise.

The use of liver to cure night blindness was mentioned in manuscripts written before the Christian era.

GWU, 8 Other Local Groups Get Woodhull Estate Grants

George Washington University was among eight local institutions to receive substantial bequests under terms of the will of Mrs. Margaret Willett Woodhull, who left an estate of more than $330,000.

Mrs. Woodhull, who lived at 1707 Massachusetts ave. nw., died July 28. A petition for probate of her will was filed in the registrar of wills office, District Court.

Under the terms of the will, the endowment fund of George Washington University will receive $50,000, Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital, $10,000; Children's Hospital, $10,000; Washington Home for Incurables, $10,000; St. John's Episcopal Church, 16th Orphanage, $5000; Protestant Episand N sts. nw., $7000; St. John's copal Cathedral Foundation, $10,000; Henry and Annie Hurt Home for the Blind, $5000.

Other large bequests included $30,000 to Maj. Gen. Henry G. Sharpe, USA (retired), and $30,000 to Deaconess Jane Gillespy, member of the Episcopal Church Order of Providence, R. I. Sums ranging from $500 to $800 were left to Mrs. Woodhull's servants.

The will also provided for her godson, Gordon Willett Hammill, Mount Vernon, N. Y.

The residue of Mrs. Woodhull's estate is to be divided equally among her husband's seven cousins. They are Margaret Bohlen, Elsie M. Caksells, Ellen W. Steele, Mrs. Ann aSteele Stone, Grace F. Tallman, Elizabeth Edes and Sarah Porr.

According to the petition for probate, filed by the American Security & Trust Co., her personal property was valued at $1,292,146, most of which was in stocks and bonds.

Her husband was the late Charles Harries Woodhull in whost memory the bequests were made.

Oatmeal Man

Gamrie, Scotland (AP).—James Rae, a farm worker, claims to be "Scotland's biggest oatmeal eater." He said when he appeared as a witness in court that it takes half a pound of oatmeal for his breakfast; that he has oatcakes at dinner; porridge at tea-time; and oatmeal puddings for supper.

Troops of the Byzantine empire made such effective use of Greek Fire, invented by Callinicus about 600 A. D., against the Saracens that it was said to have saved that empire from foreign domination for nearly a thousand years.

74 Jews, 1 Arab Die in Riots in Tripolitania

Cairo, Nov. 7 (AP).—Seventy-four Jews and one Arab were killed in anti-Jewish rioting the past three days in Tripolitania, but a curfew and shoot to kill orders to troops tonight had supresed disorders in most of the Mediterranean colony.

Arab mobs looted and gutted Jewish quarters and assaulted Jews in Tripoli, Souk El Juma and Tagiura "in a serious outbreak of rioting, violence and arson," started on Sunday night, British headquarters declared.

Tripoli itself was under heavy guard today and "the provinces remained generally quiet."

Arab Elements Blamed

The rioting, blamed by the British on "irresponsible elements who in a large majority of cases came from the Arab section of the population," hospitalized 133 Jews, 36 Arabs and 2 Italians.

The new Arab-Jewish clashes followed rioting last week in Egypt in protest of a national home in Palestine for Jews, in which 10 persons were reported killed and 520 injured.

Troops and police in Tripoli were ordered to "shoot all looters and to fire if necessary to disperse groups of more than five persons." A 9 p. m. to 5 a. m. curfew was imposed there Monday, and then extended from 5 p. m. to 6 a. m. throughout all of Tripolitania, the Italian colony where Allied and Axis armies battled in the North African campaigns.

Riots There Again

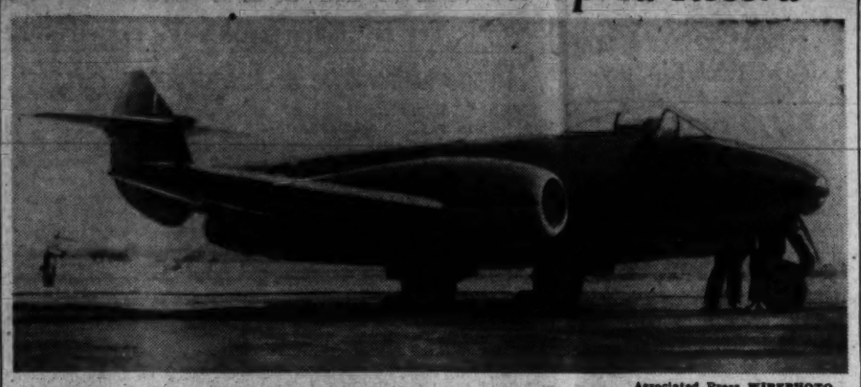

The riots started in Tripoli when "an Arab mob attacked the Jewish quarter" there, the communique said, and despite heavy guards looting, incendiarism and "isolated brutal assaults of Arabs upon Jews" flared again Monday. Rumors were spread charging Jews with crimes against Arabs, the British said.

On Monday, "undisciplined Arab mobs looted and gutted the Jewish quarter at Souk El Juma and Tagiura," the communique said, adding that it was now known "that the Jews suffered 36 killed at Souk El Juma and 4 killed at Tagiura," 5 miles east of Tripoli, with many more injured.

Cussabat and Zliten, where disorders still were reported Tuesday, are 52 and 85 miles east of Tripoli.

Subversive Arab elements have been arrested, the British said.

Baby Born After Mother Died Of Polio Given Chance to Live

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 7 (U.P.).—A two-day old baby girl, born 13 minutes after her mother died of infantile paralysis, was alive and healthy today.

Doctors predicted that, despite the baby's unusual birth, it had an even chance to survive.

Capt. O. A. Kearns, Army physician, delivered the baby, just the mother, Mrs. Hazel Sherman, 32, Woodstock, Ill., died. He said it was "healthy and should grow normally unless she later develops polio."

Capt. Kearns said he hoped the mother's illness would make the infant immune to disease. Delivered prematurely by Caesarian operation, the baby weighed 4 pounds 14 ounces.

The birth was one of very few cases on record. the physician said.

Mrs. Sherman and her oldest son, Glen, 14, were stricken with infantile paralysis last week. They were admitted to the Winnebago County Hospital, where the mother died Monday. Glen was reported to be recovering.

The father, Floyd, and five other children, Betty, Ruth, Jean, James, and Harold, decided to name the baby Hazel Evelyn, after the mother.

Indonesians Offer British Peace Plan

Batavia, Java, Nov. 7 (AP).—Indonesian leaders today submitted to the British a plan to preserve peace in Java while British troops finish disarming the Japanese and rescuing thousands of European internees menaced by extreme nationalists.

President Soekarno and Foreign Minister Soebardjo of the "Indonesian republic" proposed the plan during a meeting this morning with Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Dutch East Indies.

They suggested that Java be divided into a number of regions where contact bureaus would be set up consisting of Indonesian local leaders and British officers. This, Soekarno said, would permit the British to carry out their task without further clashes with the Indonesians because the way would be paved in advance by cooperation in the contact bureaus.

Observers believed that Christison would readily accept the plan. Such arrangements already have been made at the Dutch Naval Base of Soerabaja and at Magelang, but only after serious fighting between British troops and the Indonesians.

Java generally was quiet, but the British army newspaper said an "uneasy situation" existed at Magelang because of large concentrations of armed youth in that area.

Jeeps to Aid D. C. Mosquito Control Plan

The District Government has become jeep-minded.

An order for seven of the vehicles, declared surplus property by the Army, is being placed by District purchasing officials who envision a jeep-riding mosquito control unit in Washington.

The jeeps also may be used at the City Refuse Repair Shop to haul parts of machinery and equipment.

The three jeeps which will be alloted to the sewer department will be outfitted with oil tanks and hoses for mosquito control crews who spray catch basins and other potential breeding places.

Half-ton trucks are now used for this worok. Acting Purchasing Officer H. A. Bales also announced that the District has obtained adequate meat supplies for its hospitals and institutions for November, despite the inability of Treasury Procurement Division to provide regular meat contracts. Municipal purchasing officers bought the meat in the open market.

58 Men's Wear Stores Found Violating Rules

Baltimore, Nov. 7 (AP).—Office of Price Administration investigators, who surveyed 94 Baltimore stores selling men's apparel, said today that only 41 of them were in complete compliance with price-control regulations.

Bernard S. Needle, OPA Maryland district enforcement attorney, said that a survey of retail outlets throughout the State would follow the city inquiry.

Eighteen stores were found to be charging over ceiling prices, and the remaining outlets failed to mark price ceilings and regulations correctly, Needle said.

25 Students Flying Planes Despite Cost

More than 25 District high school aviation students are flying planes, and more than half of these already have taken solo flights, a survey revealed here yesterday.

Although the District Board of Education has so far looked with disfavor on proposals to bring flight training into the aviation course, these 'teen age air enthusiasts are learning to fly at local airports at $10 a lesson.

If lessons could be obtained cheaper through schools classes, the number would soar to around 300, youngsters predict.

Mrs. Preston Bean, mother of a 17-year-old aviation student at Coolidge High School, puts it this way. "I don't see how I could object if Gene wanted to fly. Flying is part of our new age."

Board of education members have expressed concern over "dangers" of introducing flying into dents disagree.
public schools. Teachers and stu-

Jean Wadlington, 16-year-old girl flier from Western High School who has 5 hours of solo flight to her credit, says "Flying is safer than driving a car. You are fastened in with a safety belt, and you have the engine in front, a long tail in back and wings on each side to protect you in case of a crash."

Dick Hildreth, 17, of Wilson, who has soloed 8 hours is positive, "You would have to do some pretty stupid things to crack up a Piper Cub." He looks forward to flying a plane between business appointments after finishing school.

The District Corporation Counsel's office this summer advised the board of education congressional action is necessary to permit flight training by the schools.

Md. Mother of 24 To Ride in Parade

Emmitsburg, Md., Nov. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Charles Clarke of Thurmont, mother of 24 children and donor of 11 pints of blood to the Red Cross, will ride on a float in an Armistice Day and Veterans Day parade.

Seven fire companies and veterans of foreign wars from Gettysburg, Waynesboro, Westminster, Frederick, Boonsboro, Taneytown and Brunswick will march in the procession.

Property Owners Ask Repairs in Sunnybrook

More than 80 per cent of the 200 homeowners in Sunnybrook, Md., have signed a petition requesting the resurfacing and repair of all streets, concrete gutters and drainage within the community.

The petition will be presented to the Prince Georges County Road Commission for authorization, next Tuesday. The resurfacing will include a bituminous road mix over a 2-inch compacted surface.

Naked Girls Used as Nazi 'Freezing' Cure

Nuernberg, Nov. 7 (U.P.).—An American investigator said today that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering ordered scientists at Dachau concentration camp to freeze camp inmates to the point of death and then revive them if they could.

The scientists used such varied methods as immersing them in hot water and making naked girls nestle against them, he said, adding that some had been successful and added to the general knowledge.

The investigator, Maj. Leo Alexander of Duke University, studying the documented experiments in preparation for the German war criminal trials, said that some of the methods arrived at so inhumanely would save many lives.

If the experiments with girls had proved successful, girls would have been put aboard Nazi vessels to "warm to life" downed Nazi fliers rescued from the North Sea, the documents revealed.

Alexander said the German scientists "wallowed in blood and obscenity" but proved the falsity of a universally practiced first aid technique of cold compresses in freezing cases and proved several important life-saving medical facts which might have remained undiscovered. The hot water immersion method is probably the best, he said, while the naked girls had little effect on the frozen men.

WMC Head Lauds Industry in Md.

Baltimore, Nov. 7 (AP).—Lawrence Fenneman, Maryland director of the War Manpower Commission, credits cooperation and not legal authority with the success of WMC in Maryland throughout the war.

Fenneman last night told members of the oil industry who served on the Petroleum Administration for War that WMC controls over essential and nonessential workers and industries probably would not have been upheld had they been contested in the courts.

Fenneman said, "We had only an executive order backing us up, but we can thank Maryland industry, Maryland labor and the general public that the War Manpower Commission went through the entire war without a single test of its authority."

Bigger Leaf Crop Advised in Md.

College Park, Md., Nov. 7 (AP).—Dr. T. B. Symons, extension director of the University of Maryland, urged southern Maryland farmers today to grow more tobacco, pointing out that the Maryland leaf is a type much in demand for cigarette blends.

Growers of the five southern Maryland counties met recently with a State committee, which is working to help solve crop problems.

Delinquency Of Child Laid To 'Pressures'

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 7 (AP).—Emotional disturbances in children lead to 91 per cent of the juvenile delinquency and in many cases the parents are to blame, the National Home Demonstration Council was told today.

Miss Genevieve Taylor, chief probation officer of the Columbus Juvenile Court, declared home and community pressures were important influences leading to juvenile delinquency.

Miss Taylor asserted delinquency could be lessened if parents saw to it their children received proper training in sex education and were taught to strive for goals, rather than "to have everything handed" to them.

Miss Taylor listed these types of parents who might be blamed for creating home problems which might lead to delinquency of their children:

1. Parents who are cruel or selfish. The aggressive problem child often comes from parents of this type.

2. Apathetic parents. From them comes the child who is permitted to roam the streets.

3. Overindulgent parents who do not exercise control over their children.

Kin of Hyattsville Hero Get Award

Baltimore, Nov. 7 (AP).—Army awards have been presented to five Marylanders, two of them from Baltimore, Third Service Command headquarters announced today.

The Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with one Oak Leaf Cluster were awarded posthumously to First Lieut. Vernon L. McKinstry, jr., Air Corps, for his service on bombardment missions over enemy-occupied Europe. The medals were received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon L. McKinstry, Hyattsville.

Bronze Star Medals went to Capt. Jovan M. Obradovic, Infantry, posthumous, received by his wife, Mrs. Alvina M. Obradovic of Highfield, who has a 22-month old-son; to Sergt. Norman J. Eurice, Infantry, posthumous, received by his wife, Mrs. Helen A. Eurice, Middle River, who has two young sons; to Pfc. Robert S. Veira, Field Artillery, posthumous, received by his mother, Mrs. Marie M. Veira, 2070 Linden ave., Baltimore.

Charles L. Allen, Baltimore, a discharged veteran, received the Purple Heart for wounds received in action.

VPI Commandant To Retire Dec. 1

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Col. George Henderson, professor of military science and tactics and commandant of cadets at Virginia Tech, will return to civilian life December 1 and Col. Thomas W. Munford, Coast Artillery Corps, will succeed him, Dr. John R. Hutcheson, VPI president, said he was informed yesterday.

Colonel Henderson will resume his private law practice in Cumberland, Md.

Discoveries Increase Oil Supply 56%

Bartlesville, Okla., Nov. 7 (AP).—New discoveries have increased the United States known oil reserves faster than the unprecedented demands of a world-wide war used up oil, Frank Phillips, head of the Phillips Petroleum Co., said today.

Proved reserves have increased 56.6 per cent from 1937 through 1945, Phillips said, "and there still are vast areas in the United States favorable for the acumulation of oil which have not been prospected."

Phillips said he could see no present possibility of synthetic fuels replacing natural petroleum products.

The never ending hunt for new oil pools will continue "on a large scale," Phillips, now chairman of the board of the company bearing his name, continued.

He expected the trend in hunting new fields to be toward location of pools through geopogical and geophysical exploration, rather than through actual drilling. The drilling, he indicated, would come later, when the oil was needed.

Soldier Reenlists To Find Family

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 7 (AP).—For Sergt. Amadeo Colacino of Long Island City, N. Y., his reenlistment in the Army is a ticket to see his wife and 7-year-old daughter.

Colacino, a former New York importer, reversed the usual procedure of getting a discharge and heading home by signing up again so that he could go to Europe and locate his family, stranded in Italy since 1941.

Lieut. Col. Albert J. Steinhardt said that Colacino requested European duty and would be given a 90-day furlough upon arrival in Europe to seek his wife and daughter.

Utility Walkout

The bus and streetcar operators of Washington have furnished the Labor-Management Conference with a superb dramatization of its problem. That problem necessarily entails something more than the simple establishment of procedures for the resolution of employer-employe disputes. The procedures must be respected and observed if they are to afford any real protection to the public interest. In the Capital Transit situation, there was no lack of procedure formally agreed upon in a written contract by management and the union. There was provision for collective bargaining and, if that failed, for arbitration. But the operators walked out, anyhow; and for a day and a half the buses and streetcars of this community were stalled.

Whatever the provocation that lay behind this walkout, it could not justify the sudden abrogation of a contract voluntarily entered into, presumably in good faith. This sort of breach of contract throws a cloud on the validity of all labor-management agreements and thus makes collective bargaining more difficult. As we have said before, we have no sympathy with the hysterical proposal put forth by the House Military Affairs Committee last week which would deprive a union of its collective-bargaining rights if it were guilty of violating a no-strike agreement. This would merely cause unions to eschew such agreements. And it boils down, anyway, to the absurdity of punishing a failure to bargain collectively by forbidding further collective bargaining.

But some sanctions to enforce observance of contracts by both parties now appear to be essential. It behooves the Labor-Management Conference to devise them. For if it does not do so, restrictive and punitive legislation is all too likely to emerge from the ill temper now prevalent on Capitol Hill. Public utility tie-ups at the seat of the Nation's Government are scarcely tolerable. Our latest was fortunately very brief in its duration, and the transit workers returned quickly to a recognition of their responsibilities. But we cannot afford to have any more such brainstorms. In these matters, an ounce of prevention is worth several pounds of cure.

Dope Rackets

The arrest of about 250 persons accused of traffic in narcotic drugs and the seizure of about $50,000 worth of opium, heroin and marijuana, or hashish, in a series of week-end raids, are indication that the dope evil in Washington has again got out of control. Indeed, according to officers of the narcotics division of the Treasury Department, dope peddlers and dope addicts have been filtering into Washington from various parts of the country, especially Baltimore, where they have been frightened away by the severe sentences imposed on chronic offenders by the Federal Courts, and from Virginia and North Carolina. Thus the peddlers come here because the risks are much slighter in proportion to the profits and the addicts come here because they are assured of a supply. Most of the addicts keep themselves in funds by petty thievery of one sort or another, such as pocketbook snatching, shoplifting, pocket-picking, housebreaking, and so complicate the already too grievous problems of the Metropolitan Police.

The correction of this situation seems to lie wholly with the courts. For reasons not quite clear the judges here are disposed to be indulgent in such cases. The usual sentence seems to be about eight months, which is invariably served in the Lorton Reformatory. Elsewhere, however, the usual sentence is about 38 months in some Federal penitentiary. The effect of this moderation is shown in the fact that some 10 per cent of the cases developed from the recent raids are of persons who at the time of arrest were under bond or parole for similar offenses. Another 10 per cent have a record of three or more arrests for the same offense. Thus the plea of Narcotics Commissioner Anslinger for an amendment to the enforcement statute that would make a three-year sentence mandatory in the case of all second offenders seems warranted by the conditions now existing in Washington.

Most of the dope traffic is in heroin, one of the cheapest and most dangerous of the drugs. However, the arrest of a large number of Chinese in the recent raids shows that the opium racket is still extensive and a formidable problem. Most of the opium now comes from India, where it can be purchased freely and openly by seamen and even by American soldiers in uniform who may desire to smuggle it at great profit into the United States. The best and surest way to choke off the opium traffic would be at the source, and this certainly seems a matter in which the British authorities owe us full cooperation.

Molotov's Speech

Not even an order of the day came from Stalin on the occasion of the twenty-eighth anniversary of the Russian Revolution. He was not even present at the party celebration in the Kremlin. All the more reason exists for a close reading of what Foreign Commissar Molotov had to say.

For the first time the Russians, who have hitherto preserved an eloquent silence on the subject, referred to the atomic bomb. Molotov dismissed, as all scientists do, the notion that the technical secret can be kept long. He warned against either complacency or political exploitation on the part of the present monopolists. We hope some of our legislators will take the hint. They seem to be under the impression that the United States holds the secret of the technical know-how, though in fact the British and the Canadians share it. The warning against "a propensity to exploit the discovery in the play of forces in international policy" is vaguely worded. Molotov is everlastingly right if he means that the atom bomb should not be used as a weapon in power politics. He is wrong if he thinks that we should not use it in an endeavor to pry open the Soviet Union on a reciprocal basis. There is no option in this village of a world, where no authority exists for controlling armaments, but to make the attempt.

The Soviet Commissar himself gives the reason why this country should take the lead in promoting a world accord by means of the atom bomb. The reason is his own prescription for peace. "We must be guided," he says, "not by feelings of revenge but by the effort to prevent a renewal of aggression and to put possible new aggressors in a position of literal isolation among the people." This sentence has particular reference to the vanquished nations. But it has a general application. Peace can come only by a dynamic use of American diplomacy in a world that is bound to become trigger-happy with the competitive exploitation of atomic energy. New aggressors can easily be put on the spot. Let us make the suggestion at once of an atomic concert based upon the setting up of an atomic commission armed with the same extraterritorial powers as the International Red Cross. Those who will not join such a body would clearly be enemies of peace. For they would show that they were willing to leave mankind a prey to fear, and it would not be an improper use of the word in this atomic age, consequently, to call them aggressors. Accordingly they should be "isolated," as Mr. Molotov proposes; i. e., the peace-loving nations willing to join the concert should ban the export to the unwilling nations of the thousand or so items that go into the instruments of war, including even trade magazines. It is not sufficient any longer to talk peace, we must act it.

What Molotov has to say on the issues that divide the great powers will help in the great task of clarifying differences. It is obvious that the Russians pride themselves on their brand of democracy. Call it social democracy, and you would not be stretching a point. The division of the land across the whole of the states on Russia's western frontiers has lifted millions of Europeans out of a Middle Age state of agrarian feudalism. Molotov does not extend any understanding ear to our view of political democracy, as is shown in his reference to the coming election in Russia as a democratic manifestation, though, as everybody knows, only party members are entitled to vote under the Soviet constitution. In these circumstances our policy should be exactly expressed as aimed at advancing representative institutions and reciprocal freedom of information.

There is no hint in the speech that the empty Russian seat at the Far Eastern Advisory Commission will soon be filled. President Truman said that Stalin's recent letter to him on the subject was "satisfactory," Secretary Byrnes used the word "encouraging," but Mr. Molotov says, more forthrightly, that "the differences that exist on this question have not yet been eliminated." Not a word is said about China. As to Germany, the Foreign Commissar wants to expedite the pace of enforcement of the Potsdam agreement. It seems to us that the best chance of winning agreement on these outstanding issues is to thresh them out bilaterally. The world, we are convinced, is far more afraid of a Russo-American stalemate than a Russo-American front. Obviously the United States requires peace. We must likewise assume that the Russians need at least a breathing spell of 20 years in order to repair both their human and physical devastation. Fears and suspicions, as Molotov's reference to blocs indicates, still govern Moscow's attitude toward the outside world. But, if there is to be peace in our time, Russia, along with other countries, must take risks for it, and one of those risks is the opening up of her country at least to an atomic commission.

Back To Lansing

Critics of Secretary Byrnes' speech proclaiming America's recognition of Soviet Russia's "special security interests" in central and eastern Europe are declaring gloomily that its consequences are likely to prove as unfortunate as those which flowed out of the Lansing-Ishii exchange of notes in 1917. Superficially at least the Byrnes declaration does, indeed, bear a striking resemblance to the 1917 exchange with Japan. In that exchange President Wilson's Secretary of State and Japan's special envoy mutually proclaimed that "territorial propinquity creates special relations between countries and consequently the Government of the United States recognizes that Japan has special interests in China, particularly in the part to which her possessions are contiguous." In Mr. Lansing's eyes this was merely the statement of a fact and involved no abrogation or limitation of the Open Door policy which, as it happened, was reenunciated in the exchange of letters. But the Japanese made use of the Lansing-Ishii letters to justify a policy of imperialistic expansion in China. By the same token, it is said, Mr. Byrnes' olive branch to Moscow will be regarded by Moscow as a green light to intensify rather than reduce her pressures on European countries adjacent to the Soviet Union.

However, any such action on Russia's part would be in violation of the spirit as well as the letter of Mr. Byrnes' declaration, Even while admitting that Russia has "special security interests" in central and eastern Europe, he made it clear that this does not mean that Russia has any right to destroy the independence or restrict the sovereign rights of those neighbors or to prevent them from pursuing a policy of friendship with nations in other parts of the world. His main emphasis was on the necessity in central and eastern Europe as well as elsewhere of pursuing a good neighbor policy similar to that which obtains in this hemisphere. It is in that spirit, and only in that spirit, that America is prepared to approve Russian moves designed to safeguard her legitimate interests in the region west of the Soviet Union. In contrast to Lansing, whose language was vague, Byrnes has spelled out just what he means.

Hungarian Election

The balloting in Hungary, according to observers at Budapest, was the freest and fairest in Hungarian history and resulted in a resounding victory for the Small Landholders' Party. Again we have a demonstration that while Europe is moving more or less rapidly to the left, it is not going Communist. In Hungary's case this demonstration is all the more striking in view of the Russian occupation.

It is true that the Russian occupation authorities had sought to get the Small Landholders to form a common list with the Socialists and Communists. Marshal Klementy Voroshiloff, the head of the Allied Control Commission, even went so far as to warn the Hungarians that, unless this request was complied with, the elections would probably be accompanied by "anarchy and civil war." This demand was resisted, though the Small Landholders' Party did agree that, no matter what the results of the elections, they would favor the continuation of the present government coalition of anti-Fascist parties. The pledge apparently satisfied the Russians who, it must be said, made no further attempt to influence the elections.

Of the votes cast, around 60 per cent went to the Small Landholders, a moderate party somewhat to the Left of the center. The Social Democrats attained a total of approximately 20 per cent, with the Communists trailing with between 12 and 15 per cent. The Right parties, which once played a dominant part in Hungarian affairs, were completely snowed under. Hungary is thus the first former Axis satellite to fulfill the hopes expressed in the Declaration of Crimea. This month will also see elections in Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Austria. It is to be hoped they will be as free and uninfluenced as were those in Hungary, though that possibility is only a faint one at the moment in every case but Austria's. At any rate, Hungary has set her neighbors a useful and hopeful example.

Back To Tammany

The record-breaking plurality by which William O'Dwyer won the New York mayoralty contest is already being interpreted by Democratic leaders as a foretaste of greater triumphs to come in 1946 and 1948. This assumption is based on the undeniable fact that in all our cities party labels largely influence the choice of candidates for municipal office, despite the fact that efficiency and honesty should be the determining factors in local elections. That being the case, it must be conceded that Mr. O'Dwyer's victory is likewise a victory for Tammany and the American Labor Party that has a national as well as local political significance.

Nevertheless, many extraneous factors have to be taken into account in assessing the political importance of this particular victory and its bearing on future State and national contests. For the past 12 years New York City has supported a Fusion administration that has placed efficiency above formal political affiliations as a qualification for office. But the American electorate has a confirmed habit of reverting to old allegiances, however discredited, when memories of past abuses grow dim. New York had reached—indeed, had passed—the period when such a reversion was to have been expected. Moreover, Mayor LaGuardia gave the back-to-Tammany movement a powerful impetus by supporting a "No Deal" candidate who destroyed whatever chances of victory the rather weak Republican-supported Fusion candidate might have had. Add to that the fact that the Tammany-ALP candidate is a man of ability with an outstanding record of public service, and the total spelled victory. Under the circumstances we doubt whether the outcome can be regarded as symptomatic of a national trend, though it may impair Governor Dewey's chances of reelection next year.

TIME

As unobtrusively as mist
The gentle years come down;
Time settles like some sorrow poured
Upon the quiet town.

As imperceptible as dusk
When cupped within the hands,
The spilling hour keeps piling up
The everlasting sands.

The moments are as autumn leaves
That spill upon the air,
Brought down from some perpetual tree
That never shall go bare.

Human Progress

By Malvina Lindsay

Men or Robots?

AT LAST we seem to be on the verge of taking ourselves in hand. Yet there is grave danger it will again be a matter of "too little and too late." For four weeks physical scientists have been telling a Senate subcommittee of all we should be doing through a national research foundation to extend our control over nature—and its product, the atom bomb. For one day social scientists told what we might be doing to extend our control over ourselves.

There is little doubt but that the Senators who heard the testimony will recommend that social science research be included in the proposed research foundation, whose goal is to bring Americans a "more abundant life." But will Congress recognize the importance of this? Will the American people? Will all of us wake up to the fact that unless we become informed, wise, and strong enough to dominate science, it will dominate and probably annihilate us?

THE SENATORS conducting the hearing were none too optimistic about getting people to understand that research to enable a man to live in harmony with his neighbors was as important as research to make it possible for him to travel around the world a half hour quicker than formerly. As Senator J. William Fulbright pointed out, it is easy to get people to appreciate an automobile or a bathtub, but hard to get support for social progress. "I think this is our greatest weakness as a Nation," he observed.

Yet in view of the possibilities of the atom bomb, how much longer can we afford this attitude? How much longer can we go on in this horse-and-buggy age of human relationships, while technology, through the freeing of nuclear energy, has jumped centuries ahead?

Social problems have been piling up on us for a long time (we have been told for decades how far scientific development is ahead of our social intelligence) and now a whole avalanche of them threatens. For, as Dr. William F. Ogburn, professor of sociology in the University of Chicago, testified, every important mechanical invention creates a new social problem. The steam engine increased divorce, the automobile stepped up crime, the atomic bomb has brought mass murder of civilians, as well as multitudes of lesser social upsets.

Why then should we not be begging social scientists to discover the why of jingoes, despots, rabble rousers, race baiters, local and international gangsters, potential Hitlers, that we may seek a cure or a curb for these social misfits before they succeed in pushing the world over the cliff?

WHY SHOULD we not be turning our attention from walkie-talkies and nylon stockings to imploring social scientists to get busy on human problems—and giving them the resources to do so? Why should we not be urging them to do research on how better labor-management relations can be developed; how our laborious eighteenth century government procedures (particularly in Congress) can be modernized; our medieval cities made more habitable; our workers guided to the right jobs; our marriages and family life made happier and more socially productive; how our education can indeed become the art of human guidance; above all, how we can understand the culture and background of other nations so we can do our part in getting along with them?

The social scientist, of course, does not guarantee the answer to these problems—at least not off the cuff. However, as Dr. Ogburn pointed out, the atomic scientists had 20 years of research, 75,000 workers and two billion dollars. "If the social scientists," he said, "had even a small portion of the two billion, and a few years, they could give better answers."

But even Government endowed research (assuming that it is not too much of an ivory tower enterprise and does not get bogged down in statistics) is only a part of the approach to the problem. Two great needs exist, and for these all of us are responsible. One is raising the level of elementary education so more citizens will think for themselves, not be, as Senator Harley M. Kilgore remarked, "suckers for a slogan." The other is developing more and better political and social leadership. Both of these will come only when we are either awakened or frightened into shifting our absorption from gadgets to human beings.

To Prevent War

Are not these two of the ways in which we, the people, can assist in preventing war?

1. To replace unreasonable suspicion by confidence in understanding of and friendliness toward the people of all democratic nations "in the making," particularly since no nation has as yet arrived at complete democratic government.

2. To study and discuss State, national and international affairs and to elect representatives who daily practice the principles of the Golden Rule from the international level of perception.

How very true is the statement expressed by Secretary Byrnes: "The maintenance of peace depends not on any document, but upon what is in the minds and hearts of men."

Leftist Trend

By Barnet Nover

What Europe's Elections Show

SINCE VE-Day, elections have been held in five European countries—Great Britain, France, Denmark, Norway and Hungary.

In each case purely local factors complicated the outcome of the balloting. Yet taken together the five elections reflect a fairly uniform trend in Europe's political thinking at this time.

In Great Britain, widespread bitterness over the blundering prewar foreign policy of the Conservative Party plus disgust over Winston Churchill's inept electioneering tactics undoubtedly helped swell the Labor vote. Yet that vote, as a whole, was far more than a reflection of remembered grievances. It revealed a basic desire on the part of a majority of the British people for a more democratic economic system.

THE SAME TREND was made visible in the French elections—municipal, cantonal and national. To be sure, the voting for deputies to the Assembly was complicated by the circumstance that even while choosing those deputies the voters were called upon to decide whether they wanted the old constitution retained or a new constitution drawn up. And there was the further complication that in making that decision they were passing judgment on the leadership of General De Gaulle.

Nonetheless, the returns showed clearly that, if we make the necessary allowances for national differences, what happened in France was on all fours with what had happened earlier eral de Gaulle.

The same is true of the Norwegian elections of October 8, and with local differences of the Danish elections of October 30 and the Hungarian elections of November 4, the first truly democratic elections ever held in that country and the first held anywhere in southeastern Europe since the end of the war.

BOTH in Great Britain and Norway the Laborites won a clear-cut majority.

In Denmark, the Social Democrats, long the dominant party in the Danish Parliament, slipped back from the peak reached in the elections of 1943 when 66 Socialists were elected. In the new Folkething (the Danish Lower House) the Danish Socialists will be represented by only 48 members.

In France, the Socialists elected a large number to the Constituent Assembly but were topped by the Communists, with the Catholic MRP (Popular Republican Movement) a close runner-up.

In Hungary, both Marxist parties—the Socialists and the Communists—were swamped in the electoral tidal wave that swept the Small Landholders Party into undisputed primacy.

IN ALL FIVE countries the Communists made gains, in some cases very considerable gains.

These gains were negligible in Great Britain where the Communist strength in Parliament which used to be one is now two. They made considerable gains in France. And there will be sizable contingents of Communists in the new Norwegian, Danish and Hungarian Parliaments, where, before the war, they represented negligible or nonexistent or suppressed political forces.

Yet all five elections showed a trend that is anything but communistic. In fact, if these elections reveal anything at all they reveal that Europe is not going Communist.

EUROPE, however, is very definitely moving to the left, politically speaking.

In every country where the people have had a chance to vote, Denmark being the sole possible exception, the conservative elements have been routed. The elements now dominant represent either an intensification of leftist political trends already noticeable before the war—Great Britain and Norway are the best illustrations of that—or the rise of new leftist forces, such as the Small Landholders Party in Hungary which while non-Marxist favor a more or less radical program of social and economic reform.

THOSE FIVE ELECTIONS are also significant for two other reasons.

In the first place, they have witnessed the emergence of new individuals, and in countries that were under German occupation of individuals who played important parts in the resistance movement.

In Norway, for instance, four members of the new cabinet, including the new Prime Minister, spent long years in German concentration camps because of their opposition to the Nazis.

In the new British House of Commons the new faces greatly outnumber the old. The same is true in the French Assembly, which has 186 veteran legislators and 371 new members.

IN THE SECOND place the elections have revealed that there is no love lost between the Socialists and the Communists.

In France, Norway, Denmark and Great Britain the Socialists refused to form a common electoral front with the Communists. The Popular Front of pre-war days is a thing of the past although, for practical reasons, Communists and Socialists together with representatives of other parties are to participate in the governments of Hungary and France.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Transit Tie-Up

The sudden and unannounced walkout of transportation operators in the National Capital is something which should be corrected at once. It is something which should not have been permitted to exist for an hour, much less a day. The crippling effect on the work and business of the Government itself calls for immediate Government action.

There are various ways of meeting this scandalous situation, but delay is not one of them.

1. The buses are owned by the Office of Defense Transportation. They are only leased to the Capital Transit Co. Recapture these buses and run them with soldier drivers.

2. Guarantee military protection to all transit operators who want to go to work.

3. Revoke and cancel the franchise of the Capital Transit Co. if that be necessary.

The citizens of Washington have no vote, but as citizens they are entitled to full protection by the Government in the matter of public transportation service. The newspapers should not treat this matter as a joke. It is far too serious in its ramifications to be laughed off.

Halloween Damage

In the November 2 paper appears a brief article headed, "Street Lights Badly Damaged on Halloween," in which Inspector Callahan claims the damage this year was considerably less than last year.

Maybe one reason it appeared to the inspector to be less was that some of us who suffered heavy damage did not bother to report it to the police. If you care to send somebody out to see the evidence, I shall be glad to show you a rock the size of a man's fist which was hurled through my dining room window at 1:30 a. m. with such force that it not only broke the glass but tore through the window-shade, hit a wall on the opposite side of the room, breaking the plaster, then bounced back onto my serving chest with such power that the linen scarf was imbedded one-eighth inch deep into the mahogany of the chest. Nice innocent prank, like breaking street lamps and starting small fires!

In my humble opinion if the newspapers and radio commentators next year will give no publicity whatsoever to the approaching Halloween it might help the situation. In any event, something should be done to curb the destruction.

Use For 'Dirty Dollars'

The other day I read in the newspaper that the alien property custodian now holds the sum of more than $22,000 for the account of Adolf Hitler; this sum represents the royalties from the American edition of Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf." The newspaper said that Congress would decide what to do with the money.

I think it would be appropriate to create with this money a fund, the annual interest of which should be used for some worthwhile purpose. I could imagine for instance awarding annually a prize for a German literary work written by one of those German writers who were persecuted by the Hitler regime and now live in the United States. Or it might be a prize for the best book dealing with the German question. Or a third (and this seems to me almost the best) solution would be to start a series of translations of American books in the field of history, politics or government into German. There are many American books from which the Germans could learn how a republican form of government and a democratic society function if we can offer these books to the German people in their own language. The annual income from the above mentioned sum should be enough to pay each year a translator and the publishing expenses of one American book suited for this particular purpose. A commercial publishing house should be in charge of the undertaking, but the net profit should be added to the fund.

Let Public Sit In

Since organized labor demands the right of collective bargaining, let us have real collective bargaining with all the interested groups represented. The group that is interested in the results of all collective bargaining is the public, which, as a rule, is not represented at the bargaining table. In all fairness, therefore, a representative of the public should be present at all collective bargaining. Under the present political setup with its influence thrown largely on the side of organized labor, the public representative should not be chosen from among political appointees, but from some organization known for its impartiality. The public interest would then receive the consideration to which it is entitled.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Attlee And Truman

THE WHITE HOUSE will receive at the end of the week a visitor on a mission of the utmost importance. Prime Minister Attlee is coming by plane for a stay of a week or more.

There were many reasons why Attlee should not have come at this time. He has his own pressing domestic problems, including a dock workers' strike which has at last ended after threatening to cut into Britain's already meager food supply.

His coming at this time is a measure of the urgency of feeling in England to reach an understanding with this country. Prime Minister Attlee is going more than halfway to help solve the problems that stand in the way of full cooperation between the two countries.

The announced subject of discussion is the atomic bomb. It would be surprising if opinion in Britain on this subject were not more urgent than it is here.

THE BRITISH, in the last year and a half of the war, had a preview of the wars of the future. Crude as they were, since they were only in the beginning stage, the V-1 and the V-2 were deadly and terrifying weapons.

The V-2, in particular, has a quality of menacing horror that is difficult to describe. Coming out of the stratosphere with a speed greater than that of sound, the weapon spread wholesale death and destruction; and there was absolutely no defense against it. If German scientists had been able to put atomic power in the warhead of the V-2, then London would have been destroyed in a few days and the Nazis would have won the war.

That is the urgency behind opinion in England. We here on the safe side of the Atlantic, even those of us who for a few weeks or a few months shared the British experience, can have no idea of what this means. And while our military men have told us that these same flying missiles can soon span the Atlantic, our minds refuse to take in this dreadful fact.

While the atomic bomb and its control will have No. 1 priority in the talks between Prime Minister and President, they will not limit their conversations to this subject. They will surely discuss the loan that is now pending.

Both Truman and Attlee are sensible men. They should be able to see through the mischievous nonsense that has come from some quarters on this subject.

There has been an effort to make it seem that opposed economic philosophies were involved—deficit spending as against sound finance. England's present financial plight is a direct outgrowth of her huge expenditures for war. The loan to Britain, if it is approved on both sides of the Atlantic, will be part of the great task of repairing the ravages of the global conflict.

WHILE THERE IS a conflict between our short-range interest and our long-range interest, reasonable and sensible men should be able to resolve that conflict.

For the immediate future the urgent needs of the British, which could presumably be fulfilled through purchases in America made out of an American loan, pile up on top of the needs and desires of American consumers. This concentration of demand can have a dangerously inflationary effect on the American economy, unless we are willing to accept some controls until our productive machine gets into high gear.

But the danger of inflation is likely to be brief. The long-term problem—the big question mark that all of us face as Americans—is how to keep our greatly expanded and far more efficient productive machine in full operation in peace as in war.

It is here that we need world trade. It is here that cooperation is imperative. It is here that preferences and blocs and tariffs can lead to commercial battles which, in turn, generate fighting wars.

Americans who look about at the rest of the world with a holier-than-thou attitude are victims of the old isolationism. If the world does not exist in our image, then we will have none of it. That kind of thinking can nullify all the fine words about peace and cooperation.

Park Cars In Mall

The Mall is useless as a beauty spot, especially the eastern half—14th to 2d sts. This area, excluding thoroughfares and buildings, has a potential parking area of ¼ square mile (6,969,600 square feet). Of this, over 25% is now unused and the balance will be available as the tempos come down. When that day comes, there will be a total area (deducting one third for lanes, etc.) of 4,646,400 square feet or enough (at 100 square feet each) for 46,464 cars—one sixth of all automobiles with District tags. And a grand potential of 60,000 to 100,000 cars per day, allowing for a conservative turnover rate.

The whole area, done in sections as space becomes available, could be cindered, fenced and marked for less than a million. A low rental fee would amortize this and maintenance and collection expenses in a year. Thenceforth, the same fee could provide a neat take for the Government and/or private enterprise.

In addition much valuable property on D and E and other streets would be turned from garages to useful purposes.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Labor Bargaining Position

THE DOMINATING FACT in the immediate situation is, it seems to me, that employes and employers realize that with the end of the war their bargaining position will be much changed. This is the reason why collective bargaining is not producing industrial peace: the disputes are not primarily about the terms of the bargain but about relative bargaining power now and in the near future.

LIPPMANN

FOR DURING the war the bargaining position of labor and capital have been abnormal. On the one hand the draft and industries working under war contracts created a demand for labor which was greater than the supply. On the other hand, in the war industries the Government was the real employer, and private corporations were its hired agents: the Government, being sovereign, had the power to create money to pay whatever it was necessary to pay to get the work done. As a result, workers who were not subject to the draft or frozen in conspicuous jobs, went into collective or individual bargaining with the assurance that the employer had little incentive to bargain, or little power if he wished to bargain.

The temper of Congress today reflects the resentment of the smaller employers and of housewives, especially in the towns and villages, over the altogether abnormal bargaining power of working men and women during the past few years. They feel it to be a change in the foundation of the social order to which they are accustomed, and indeed —if it were permanent—it would be. Many of them have ascribed the change,—under which they are unable to bargain with labor as they once did—to the New Deal, to communism. But in fact it is due to the law of supply and demand, operating under wartime conditions.

THE RESISTANCE of Congress to separation pay for war workers has been due, quite clearly, to the feeling that this was a Government subsidy to prolong the exceptional bargaining power of labor. Here too, undoubtedly, is the mainspring of the opposition to the full employment bill: a coalition of Southerners and of Northerners from districts where industrial labor is not strong are in no mood to provide full employment after several years' experience of what has been not only full employment, but in fact overfull employment. They see in "full employment" a Government guaranty that employers—which means not so much the giant corporations but little businessmen, Main Street merchants, farmers, housewives seeking to employ a maid or a handyman—will have no bargaining power in regard to wages, hours, or the quality of the work done for wages.

The underlying fact is—to put it bluntly—that in reaction against the consequences of excess employment there is a patent desire in the great middle mass of the people for enough unemployment to reestablish their lost bargaining position and to restore industrial discipline. This reaction is particularly strong, of course, wherever the war has changed the relative bargaining power of Negro and other racial minorities.

THE DIFFICULTY with collective bargaining at this time is that all parties to it are aware that their relative bargaining power is due to change. This, more than anything else, accounts for the strikes, often by the rank and file against the advice of their leaders: they are attempts to use wartime bargaining power in order to achieve gains or avoid losses before that wartime bargaining power declines. This accounts also, of course, for the attitude of employers—which is in substance that they must not and need not make bad bargains now since they will be able to make better bargains later on. For a little later on, there will be more men than there are jobs, and there will also be no more price ceilings.

Thus labor is in much more of a hurry than is capital to make settlements governing the postwar conditions of employment. That being the case, important and useful as it is to improve the machinery of collective bargaining, it is necessary that the underlying bargaining position—which is the real problem—be openly examined and understood. For while understanding will not in itself solve the problem or remove it, it will assuage it. It will enable the people who are most disinterested, who are not suffering from class blindness and are not ridden by their resentments, to maintain a decent public temper during the change, which is inevitable and disturbing, after the abnormality of war.

WE MUST RECOGNIZE, it seems to me, that we must pass through a troubled period while the bargaining position changes until we reach a new equilibrium. Our problem is to find an equilibrium at which there is neither the excessive employment of wartime nor mass unemployment.

This, if it were properly presented by its supporters and correctly understood, is the real purpose of the Full Employment Bill. It is not easy to find that middle ground of equilibrium. But there can be little doubt that we have an infinitely better chance of finding it if, using the facilities of the bill, we learn to estimate, and by checking them with events gradually to improve our estimates of whether there is likely to be an inflated and excessive or a deflated and deficient demand for goods and for labor.

A Communication Answers Fotitch

PERMIT ME to correct one of the several inaccuracies contained in the communication from Mr. Constantin Fotitch published in The Post of November 4.

It is incorrect to say that only one list of candidates is to be presented to the voters of Yugoslavia on November 11. In addition to the Liberation Front list, the various parties comprising the Front—Peasant, Communist, Democratic, Socialist, etc.—have entered separate lists in many communities. Further, under an amendment to the election law passed on October 26 after the opposition parties decided not to test their strength at the polls, there must be at each polling place a box for those who, although deprived of candidates by the action of their party leaders, nevertheless wish to be counted in opposition to the Liberation Front. It should be remembered also that the opposition leaders, who subsequently decided not to face the electorate, had participated in the drafting of the present election law and voted for its adoption.

While Mr. Fotitch's unfamiliarity with conditions in Yugoslavia may explain his error concerning the November 11 voting, it cannot, it seems to me, explain the contempt he shows for the people of his native land. These people fought very bravely in the war, and against very considerable odds. Starting in the spring of 1941, soon after the formal armies of their country capitulated to Hitler, they resisted the enemy in both guerilla warfare and open battle, unarmed at first, inadequately armed at best, and against calculated cruelties of the utmost refinement. Their allies have credited them with pinning down at least 20 enemy divisions during crucial stages of the war. And when the tide turned and the Germans and Italians sought to withdraw, the Yugoslavs under Marshal Tito, instead of hastening their departure, chose to cut off their retreat and hold them in Yugoslavia rather than permit them to join their main forces for battles on other fronts. The Yugoslav peoples did this although they well knew the cost they must pay in heavier devastation and death. Mr. Fotitch would now have Americans believe that peoples capable of this heroism, of this resistance to overwhelmingly superior force, have turned craven and will permit an unwanted domestic regime to be imposed upon them by the police.

Returning to the election, may I point out that some 8,100,000 persons will vote as compared to slightly less than three million in the last election, held in 1938, and that for the first time since 1929, when King Alexander abrogated the constitution, the balloting will be secret.

Boren Lashes Out at Olds For Far West Utility Deal

By the Associated Press

Representative Boren (D., Okla.) hit out yesterday at a proposed Far West utility transaction as a "deal that stinks to high heaven."

Boren, chairman of a House Interstate Subcommittee, made his comments at a hearing on possible revision of the 1935 Holding Company Act and directed his sharpest criticism at Chairman Leland Olds of the Federal Power Commission.

The Oklahoman quoted an article in the Washington State Grange News of November 3 as saying that Olds' office was the scene of a recen tdiscussion of purchase of the electric system of the Puget Sound Power and Light Company by public utilities district in western Washington.

Boren said that Dr. Paul Raver, of the Bonneville administration, estimated the Puget Company value at 90 million dollars four years ago.

Now, the chairman said, there is "a Wall st. deal to pay 135 million dollars for it."

He said Raver participated in the conference with the utilities officials and with Olds, and "it would be interesting to learn if Dr. Raver has changed his mind on the value of the property."

"Mr. Olds might well be asked if he initiated a conference under which the color of the blessing of the Federal Government would be put on this deal.

It appears that Mr. Olds has attempted to sprinkle holy water on a deal that stinks to high heaven."

Olds was not available for comment.

Boren said his subcommittee intended to continue an inquiry into the Puget Sound transaction, "which involves, in the chair's opinion, scandal from the standpoint of public interest."

Use of U. S. Troops to Maintain Peace Approved by Senate Unit

By the Associated Press

Legislation to put substance and force behind American adherence to the United Nations peace organization cleared its first congressional hurdle yesterday.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved a measure authorizing the President to negotiate an agreement with other members of the World Security Council as to what armed forces this country will allocate for maintenance of the peace.

The committee wrote in a restrictin that no American forces, ohtre than those covered by the agreement with the Security Council, are to be used for peace enforcement without specific approval from Congress.

The agreement itself also is subject to congressional approval.

Once the agreement is approved, the President could order the armed forces covered by it into action without asking Congress for further authority.

These provisions for the heart of legislation which undertakes to spell out in detail what this country will do to back up the general pledge it made when the Senate ratified the United Nations Charter last July.

In accepting the charter, it agreed in general term. to join with other nations to maintain peace—and to use force if necessary to maintain it.

Other provisions of the "implementing" legislation would:

1. Authorize the President to appoint, subject to confirmation by the Senate, a United States representative on the Security Council with the rank of Ambassador and annual compensation of $20,000, and a deputy representative with rank of minister and compensation of $12,000. President Truman has said he intends to appoint former Serretary of State Edward R. Stettinius to the No. 1 post.

2. Authorize the President to appoint representatives to other agencies of the United Nations with annual salaries not to exceed $12,000.

3. Direct that the representatives "shall at all times act in accordance with the instructions of the President."

4. Direct that the President make reports to Congress at least once a year, on activities of the United Nations, and make "special, chrrent reports on decisions of the Security Council to take enforcement measures."

5. Authorize the President, when called upon by the Security Council, to regulate or forbid economic relations or communications between any foreign country and any person in the United States.

Although the legislation as approved by the committee has the indorsement of both Democratic and Republican leaders, some controversy in the Senate is in prospect.

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), for one, told reporters he abjected to letting the President send any troops into action without specific approval from Congress.

"I believe that before any American boys are sent to fight on foreign soil, Congress should first pass on the question," he said.

However, Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) said he expected no major difficulty in the Senate.

Attending the committee meeting and approving the legislation were Senators Connally, George (Ga.), Green (R. I.), Hatch (N. M.) and Lucas (Ill.), Democrats, and Capper (Kan.), Vandenberg (Mich.), Austin (Vt.) and Wiley (Wis.), Republicans. Several others had given prior approval.

Old Swindle Costs Woman Life Savings

A 42-year-old Negro woman has been robbed of $1290—almost all of her life savings—by one of the oldest confidence swindles in the book, the dropped pocketbook trick, Alexandria, Va., police reported yesterday.

The victim was Mary Vaughn of 1004 Montgomery st., who is employed as a domestic by T. Clifton Howard of 207 S. Washington st.

The woman told police that one Negro struck up a conversation with her while she was on her way to work. Another Negro appeared and picked up a billfold in a nearby gutter.

The second Negro reported the billfold contained about $3600, most of it in bonds. He disappeared for awhile. When he returned he suggested a three-way split. He said his employer would cash the bonds if each posted $1200 "security."

The first Negro disappeared, then returned to announce he had posted his "security" and displayed a paper sack filled with small denomination bills. The woman withdrew $1200 from her bank, added another $90, and turned it over to the two men to post for her. She waited for them on the corner.

They never came back.

Socony Dividend Voted

Directors of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., declared an extra dividend of 15 cents payable December 15 to stockholders of record November 17. This will bring total payments for the year to 85 cents, compared with 75 cents in 1944. Last year an extra dividend of 25 cents was declared.

Mrs. Welch Dies; 'Candy Lady' Of Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Matilda A. Welch, whose homemade caramels have soothed the palates of generations of Baltimore children, died yesterday.

The 61-year-old woman whose skill earned her the appellation of "the Candy Lady" had daily for almost 33 years delivered to shops and stores the caramels which she and her husband, Dallas Welch, manufactured at their home.

Although in failing health for some time, she made her usual rounds on Monday.

"She wouldn't stop delivering her candy," said Mrs. Elmer Welch of Washington, a daughter-in-law.

"I think she would have missed too much hearing the kids and the cops and firemen call to her. The kids, especially. They would follow her car down the street yelling, 'here comes the candy lady.' Then they'd all troop into the corner store and buy some fresh caramels."

Mother, Two Girls Are Buried in Va.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Private funeral services for Mrs. Alice Virginia Welch, 45, and her two little daughters of Eastport, Md., were held at a funeral home here today.

Mrs. Welch was found dead, hanging from a rope in the yard of her home Monday by neighbors. Her children, 2 years and 5 weeks, were also found dead, apparently from fumes from a refrigerator. A verdict of suicide was issued in the death of Mrs. Welch.

The young woman left a note to her husband, a former lieutenant commander, complaining of despondency and sickness.

LEONARD LYONS

Times Square Tattle

New York, Nov. 7.—In Munich the Nazis' No. 1 Shrine was the place where the bodies of the 16 Nazis who lost their lives in Hitler's premature putsch were buried. After Hitler became Fuehrer he ordered that the remains of these first Nazis be placed in bronze caskets, and that an eternal flame be lit over their monument. When Col. Charles Keegan became military governor, he put the light out. Then he ordered the shrine torn down, and now two comfort stations occupy that spot . . . Keegan, now a candidate for city council, had the 16 bodies removed to places where they'll never be found. Then, to make sure that no memento of their martyrdom for Naziism shall ever be uncovered, he ordered the bronze caskets melted down and dumped at sea. He discovered that the Nazis lied even about their shrine. For the caskets were not bronze. The melted-down metal proved to be 75 per cent lead.

District Attorney Beldock is preparing a sensational indictment.

Shortly before Germany capitulated, its patent-documents, covering the nation's most prized inventions, were moved into a mine where chemicals were poured over the papers. This destruction job, however, was not a thorough one. Only the outer wrappings were destroyed. The patents and their descriptions of the inventions still are in the mine, because they would disintegrate if they were moved. But the Army officials are taking microphotographs of these documents, page by page, inside the mine.

Lord Vansittart will bring a libel action against Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes who, in a magazine article, made serious charges against his wartime role in English politics. Vansittart will come to America to prosecute the suit. His attorney here will be Louis Nizer, author of "What to Do With Germany" . . . The Theater Guild, which produces all of George Bernard Shaw's plays, asked him for the right to broadcast his plays on the Guild's current radio series. Shaw cabled approval, but on one condition: "Don't cut them or cook them." That's why his "Pygmalion" will be broadcast in two instalments . . . David Smart of "Esquire" will revive "Veve" magazine.

When President Truman went through the ceremonies of becoming a thirty-third degree Mason, a conflict arose between his Masonic obligations and his responsibility to cooperate with the secret servicemen assigned to his protection. The President was to enter the room where the ritual was to be performd. Outsiders naturally were barred. The secret servicemen, who were not eligible to witness the secret rituals could not enter. They waited outside until President Truman emerged, a thirty-third-degree Mason and safe.

Has His Holiday

Shirley Temple and her husband, Sergt. John Agar, went visiting Rita Hayworth on the "Gilda" set. It was a busman's holiday for Shirley, but her husband's first peek at any picture in the making. Shirley looked at the costumes and set and exclaimed, "O, wouldn't it be a wonderful place to give a Halloween party!" but nobody took the hint . . . Dorothy McGuire is the envy of many girls. She'll be able to fall into the arms of Guy Madison on the skating rink where they're practicing a sequence for a picture . . . When Lauritz Melchior's costumes didn't arrive for opening of "Tristan and Isolde," some one suggerted he sing in the clothes he was wearing. Sorry he didn't—that would have made a story. Instead he was draped in enough red velvet to make curtains for the new opera house we don't have.

Nice Work, Bing

Bing Crosby won't return to the Music Hall, but will have a show of his own in January . . . Florence George and husband Everett Crosby made a fast trip back East. Florence will sing on two radio programs early next year . . . I couldn't be happier. "The Red Mill" revival is turning 'em away in New York. Finally Eddie Foy, jr., has been hailed as a great comic and Odette Myrtil, whom we treated as a has-been, is the talk of the town . . . Little Edith Fellows also came into her own back there in "Marinka" . . . John Fredericks, who played "Ten Little Indians" throughout Europe for the USO, will join Maurice Evans in "Hamlet." Before leaving England he spent a weekend with Robert Donat, whose play "Cure for Love" may be done with Donat starring in New York by Mike Todd. Anyway Mike's interested in it.

Here's Howe for James

James Wong Howe, Chinese cameraman, and Benson Fong are shuttling between here and San Francisco getting material for a picture to be produced in China with an all Chinese cast. They'd love "Ricksha Boy" and could do a grand job with it, but the price is sky high for them . . . Lois Andrews had herself a time at the Jack Haley rehearsal when both George Jessel and Dave Street were there.

Isn't that triangle overtired from overworking its publicity? Harry Conover, who's booked beauties for years, is becoming one himself. He's steamed off 25 pounds and is taking voice lessons to play himself in "The Conover Girl" . . . Earl Oxford, who made such a hit singing "I Left My Heart at the Stage Door Canteen," will be out of uniform any minute.

Quick Change Artist

When Charles Laughton saw the nose designed for hem to play a Cyrano de Bergerac scene with Deanna Durbin, he announced it didn't blend with his face, so he carried it in his hand. Charlie has a way with noses. I remember lunching with him when he was playing Nero in "The Sign of the Cross." It was a warm day and Charlie was done up in a Roman robe of violet silk and headband of emeralds. So he just reached up, plucked the wax nose off his face, and laid it beside him on the table. We had a gallery in no time. Sure, Cuddles loved it—so did I.

'State of the Union', National, Is Lively Comedy With a Point

By Nelson B. Bell

"In "State of the Union," the shrewdly titled comedy which last night opened a brief engagement in the National Theater preliminary to Broadway, Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse examine the political scene and find it vulnerable to caustic attack and penetrating humor.

Under the lens of their impartial and for the most part disarmingly amiable microscope they observe the intricate mechanisms of both the Republican and Democratic parties, labor, management, the press, foreign policy, and even discover a few of the "bugs" to be removed from the United Nations Organization.

Their findings are disclosed in three acts and five scenes of brittle and nonpartisan humor, steadied by a clarion call for postwar unity on the home front, less emphasis on politics and more on peace and the world's stability, with strong accent on a broad national view to the future rather than merely to the next election.

This sturdy assault upon the obvious vices of a prevalent system is held together and given romantic flavor by the disturbed marital conditions that have overtaken the household of Grant and Mary Matthews.

Mr. Matthews is an airplane tycoon, who has betrayed virtues in the building of his industrial empire that have suggested to the high command in the Republican machine that he might be a likely candidate to defeat Truman for the Presidency in 1948.

He has also betrayed an interest in Mrs. Kay Thorndyke, publisher of a string of influential Republican papers, that suggests the desirability of bringing about a rapprochement between him and Mary, whose 17 years of married life have reached a point of something less than complete compatability.

Is Double-Barreled

It is upon this dual premise that the Messrs. Lindsay and Crouse have fashioned as deftly wrought a comedy as is apt to come along in a season: a charade that never allows itself to become too profound for comfort, is consistently entertining and at times uproariously amusing.

As Matthews' trial tour of the country to sound but public reaction to his political credo progresses, and his wife's effort to recapture the love that launched them toward the heights becomes more and more a bitter battle against the not too sinister designs of Mrs. Thorndyke, both the personal and the political drama of the piece roll into a crescendo of laughs and satirical "punch."

Along the way, the authors name names of the great and near-great in the public eye, pay their respects to a Democratic solid South that runs up a nice record of Republican voting in both Houses of Congress and shoot many a barbed shaft into the pet political fetiches of all the interests involved.

The effect of the play is cumulative. The first act establishes the fact of Mr. Matthews honest intentions and the depleted ardor of his domestic relations. The second involves him deeply and amusingly in the devious workings of politics' heavier machinery. The third works a clarification of all his perplexities and brings down the final curtain on an exhilarating note of exalted purpose and a shade less than complete triumph for Mrs. Thorndyke.

Well Acted and Directed

Bretaigne Windust has contributed lively and effective direction to the capabilities of a cast that performs with a gusto appropriate to the movement of a comedy designed no less for spirited entertainment than for a more substantial purpose so agreeably veneered with fun as never to be objectionably obtrusive.

In the role of Matthews, Ralph Bellamy turns in a smooth and believable performance as an ardent young man thoroughly schooled in the ways of business but a tyro in the chicaneries of the great quadrennial tilt.

Much of the play's forcefulness and a large measure of its more comic aspects are judiciously intrusted to Ruth Hussey, longer absent from the stage than many of her associates in the present work. Apart from an inclination to raise her voice above the requirements of the National's acoustics, Miss Hussey last evening achieved one of the major successes of an evening punctuated with able characterizations.

Strong In Support

From first act to last, the figure of the political leader limned by Minor Watson was a dominant force in the major movements of the action.

Kay Johnson, as the "menace" to Mrs. Matthews marital peace of mind, and Myron McCormick, as the ace newspaperman loaned to "the party" for purposes of vital publicity and equally essential soft-pedaling of the more ominous aspects of campaigning, both add strength and balance to an especially effective ensemble of principals.

Raymond Sovey's settings provide handsome background for the developments of a play that should have been allotted at least two weeks in Washington, instead of five days, even with three matinees.

HARPER

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

A high Army officer just returned from Europe reports that Stalin suffered a severe heart attack and will have to take things easy from now on. The same general reports there is dissension in the Red army over Stalin's successor . . . George Allen, one of the men closest to Harry Truman, is retiring from the White House. Although drawing no salary and still vice president of the Home Insurance Co., as well as having his finger in many other pies, Allen held down desk at the White House . . . War Department appeasers are causing trouble for Secretary Byrnes' plan to democratize Japan. Last week the Army didn't even want to send to General MacArthur Byrnes' order to remove all Jap businessmen guilty of supplying munitions to the war lords. . . . The Army also hankers to prosecute Jap war criminals itself. President Truman, however, insists that Joseph B. Keenan, handle the job . . . Meanwhile, war crimes prosecution in Japan moves at a snail's pace. Eisenhower has arrested 70,000 Nazis, MacArthur only a couple of hundred Japs.

Idle Ships—Fretful Troops

Congratulations to Secretary of the Navy Forrestal for finally getting around to ascertaining how many troops can be returned on battleships. He waited a long time (until after Navy Day), but now several battleships are being measured to see how many troops they can carry . . . By scaling battleships' crews from about 2500 to 700, they can carry about 3000 returning G. I.'s . . . Use of battleships ought not to be necessary, however, if the Nation's tremendous surplus of shipping were utilized. This now approaches scandal . . . While Seabees, sailors, marines, soldiers wait on island hell-holes or in European ports, 55 Victory ships have been removed from military service and switched to commercial trade. These were the fastest ships built during the war, all at Government expense. However, peacetime commerce now comes before peacetime repatriation of men who fought for their country . . . Tragic waste of shipping today approaches a Pearl Harbor scandal. While enlisted men eat their hearts out in Europe and the Pacific, waiting to come home, 93 vessels have been laid up in Suisan Bay, Calif., since the end of the war . . . In addition, a total of 226 ships are now in the Port of San Francisco. According to a careful survey by the maritime unions, 75 docked prior to September 30 and 55 docked the first two weeks of October . . . They are not moving. All are in good condition.

Smothering Small Business

It looks like small business, which both Roosevelt and Truman talked so much about protecting, is going to get the small end of the deal. During the war big business got most of the prime contracts. More than 50 per cent of all war orders went to just six companies. Now, by a sleight-of-hand operation, Smaller War Plants, chief protector of little business, is being gutted. Funny part of it is that the gutting of Smaller War Plants is probably unconstitutional, since what is created by Congress can't be transferred without a new act of Congress. Despite this, the main functions of Smaller War Plants are being transferred to the RFC—namely, loans to small business—while the left-over dregs are going to Henry Wallace's Commerce Department. This is taking place just after Congress got through voting Smaller War Plants the money to hire 800 extra men to sell surplus war goods to veterans. Senator Taft has said he was against passing Truman's reorganization bill because Smaller War Plants might be transferred; but he is going to wake up and find it transferred even before the reorganization bill is passed. Maury Maverick, fighting head of Smaller War Plants, has given up in disgust and is leaving for China—the Siberia of exiled American statesmen. (Donald Nelson went there before being ousted from WPB; Wallace also went there before being eased out of the Vice Presidency.) Prediction: Treasury Watchdog Lindsay Warren will not okay expenditure of funds for the gutted Smaller War Plants. He will rule that when Congress appropriates money for one thing, it has to be spent as Congress decrees, not some other way.

Pennsylvania Lawyers

After beating about the bush for some time, President Truman has finally decided that Senators are not to appoint all his new judges. Senator Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania, a stalwart Democrat, long has objected to the appointment of another Democratic stalwart, Jim McGranery of Philadelphia, to be new United States Circuit Court of Appeals judge. Guffy admits he had nothing against McGranery, but wanted another man to fill the job. However, Truman has decided to appoint McGranery anyway . . . A former Congressman, McGranery is one of the outstanding men in the Justice Department, will make an A-1 judge . . . Taking McGranery's place as No. 2 man in the Justice Department will be Congressman Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, an able citizen. Some Republicans are balking at Monroney's going to the Justice Department, because he isn't a lawyer. But the job of assistant to the Attorney General is administrative, not legal, and Monroney will do a fine job.

Jeeps For Vets

Orchids to Congressman Eddie Herbert of Louisiana for pounding home on Surplus War Property officials the importance of selling war goods to discharged veterans. The veterans are having a tough job buying Government surpluses, despite the fact that millions of dollars in jeeps, trucks, tires, etc., are lying idle in Government warehouses . . . A West Coast auto dealer recently bought 100 cars from the Government at a flat price of $250 each, is now selling them for around $1000 each. Meanwhile, veterans can't buy surplus Government automobiles . . . Best congressional plugger for the capital of the United Nations to be in the United States is Congressman Karl Mundt of South Dakota. He claims—and rightly—that if you put the world capital in the Old World, it will mean the dead hand of Old World politics clutching the United Nations . . . Mundt charges that the British, Dutch and French delegates are trying to upset the earlier vote of the United Nations Committee to establish the United Nations capital in the United States.

Capital Chaff

The island of Okinawa is rapidly getting the reputation of being the hell-hole of the armed forces. Men are living in mouldy tents. Fresh meat and vegetables are few and far between. A supply of dynamite recently went off right in the middle of a tent area, killing six men. Meanwhile, ships have been standing off Okinawa waiting for orders from Washington . . . Elder statesman Josephus Daniels, who built up the Navy to what it was in the last war, has come out editorially against President Truman and peacetime conscription. Daniels says in brief: Remove the caste system from the Army and promote the men who deserve promotion; then you will get a big enough Army without conscription . . . President Truman has decided that the Office of Strategic Services ("oh-so-secret") belongs in the War Department during peace, rather than in the State Department.

Police Find Missing Boy After 6-Hour Search

The gypsy feet of 3-year-old Jimmy Moore led his frantic parents and District police a merry chase yesterday but, after a day of sightseeing, he was safe at home last night. Jimmy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Moore of 1011 New Hampshire ave. nw., turned up missing in the midmorning and after a six-hour search was picked up by a cruising police car at 21st and L sts. nw.

Ahearn Quits as Head Of Industrial School

The Welfare Board announced yesterday that Daniel F. Ahearn has resigned as superintendent of the Industrial Home School to take a position as personnel counselor with the Veterans' Administration.

The board said that it will submit to the District Commissioners a recommendation that Lieut. John W. Tramberg, former deputy superintendent of the school, be named Ahearn's successor. Lieutenant Tramberg has notified the board that he expects his discharge from the Army by January 15, 1946.

Veterans' Housing Unit Set Up in Frederick

Frederick, Md., Nov. 7 (AP).—A veterans' housing commission has been set up in Frederick to help meet the growing demands of discharged servicemen, the Frederick Veterans' Service Commission said today. The commission estimated that 1500 or about one fourth of the Frederick men in the armed services, have been discharged.

BUY VICTORY BONDS

THIS, we reasoned, is no time to offer folks a car that stops with artful face-lifting.

It has been nearly four years since our last new Buick was built—it wouldn't be shooting square now to give you less than our honor-bright best.

So we overhauled our whole factory to advantage it with the latest in war-developed machines and processes.

We set ourselves precisions that in some cases exceed those of aircraft engine production.

We scoured the country for the stoutest metals anyone can buy today.

And we eagle-eyed every one of this Buick's 12,000 parts to see if it could be bettered in any way, big or little.

The result is that through every stunning inch of this bright new honey runs solid, dependable Buick character, honest and uncompromised.

It's in swift clean lines. In seats that are three-persons wide. In stout, time-defying frames and underpinning. Above all — in the lift and life of a Fireball straight-eight that's even livelier than in 1942.

The cars your Buick dealer will have are big. They're beautiful. They're Buicks.

Unification Plan Lacks Coordination

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer.

The Navy Department yesterday criticized the War Department's plan to unify the armed forces because of its failure to provide for coordinating the activities of the State Department and the military services.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy H. Sturve Hensel told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that the War Department's proposal would wipe out the traditional civilian control over the military and naval forces.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), acting chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, disclosed yesterday that he has asked both Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal to provide further witnesses for continuation of the hearings.

"Objective Inquiry" Assured

"We are determined," Johnson wrote, "that no one shall have reasonable cause to contend that a complete and objective inquiry will not have ben made by us."

Hensel told the committee that it was "difficult to appraise the real objective" of the War Department's plan.

"Except for setting up a military holding company over thre instead of two services," Hensel aserted, "the War Department, in my opinion, does not attempt to deal with our real objective—national security."

The Navy witness declared that professional military men would be put in direct charge of the three services.

"The main effect, if not the objective, of this plan," Hensel said, seems to be reduction of civilian control over the armed services and the separation of the Army ground and air forces."

A figurative "man at work—don't disturb" sign was hung yesterday on President Truman's office door.

White House aides said the President is trying to clear his desk as much as possible of domestic problems so that he will be free for three-power discussions of atomic energy this weekend.

It was announced that he and Prime Ministers Attlee of Great Britain and MacKenzie King of Canada will devote most of Sunday —Armistice Day—to conferences on the future use of atomic power.

The President said some time ago that he would initiate discussions with Great Britain and Canada seeking to outlaw use of the atomic bomb and later take up the matter with other governments.

The President had only six engagements on his calling list yesterday, not counting afternoon confereces with James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State, and Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan.

Calling Lists Small

Even smaller calling lists Monday and Tuesday, his aide said, reflect the seriousness with which the President views the international picture and a domestic scene punctuated by industrial strife and a stalled legislative program. He recently cancelled plans for a series of out-of-town trips.

Sunday's discussions, to take place aboard the Presidential yacht Potomac, will start immediately after 11 a. m. Armistice Day ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National cemetery.

After the President lays a wreath on the tomb the party will go to the grave of Sir John Dill, former British representative on the combined chiefs of staff, where Attlee will place a wreath.

"They then will drive directly to the yacht, remaining aboard until Sunday night. Byrnes, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, and Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's Chief of Staff, will take part in the conferences.

State Dinner Planned

The President and his distinguished visitors will devote much of Saturday to their initial discussions and there will be a state dinner in honor of the British and Canadian leaders at the White House Saturday night.

Mr. Attlee will be White House guest Saturday and Sunday nights before moving to the British Embassy Monday. Mackenzie King likely will stay at the Blair House, where high ranking visitors usually are quartered.

The three governments represented in the discussion are partners in the secret of the atomic bomb.

P-TA Wants Barber Tools Kept Sterile

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday backed the Health Department's recommendations for a new barbers' regulation forbidding the use of clippers on children unless adequate sterilization is assured.

Since the city is facing an epidemic of scalp ringworm among school-age children, such a regulation should be put into effect immediately, Mrs. A. C. Watkins, president of the organization, said.

She also pointed out that sanitary inspections of barber shops should be increased to make certain that clippers and scissors are kept sterile. Barber shops are among the many places which the District's Sanitation Bureau has been unable to inspect routinely because of personnel shortages.

A number of sanitary details in the proposed regulation are now being worked out by Maj. William H. Cary, chief of the District's Sanitation Bureau. He is arranging conferences with barbers and other interested groups, it is understood.

Saviour Sidoiti, president of the District Board of Barber Examiners, yesterday called for an immediate District decision on whether or not such a regulation would be adopted. Many barbers, he said, are complaining that they must continue to use clippers but fear that the regulations may involve complicated sterilization methods that corrode their equipment.

'Rabbit' Laughed Root Right Off the Mound

Columbus, Ohio (U.P.). — Charlie Root, new manager of the Columbus Red Birds, started reminiscing the other day and immediately thought about the time that Rabbit Maranville laughed him out of the box while he was pitching for the Chicago Cubs.

Root, grinning, recalled that Maranvillie got on first base the first time he pitched against the Boston Braves.

"Rabbit started jumping off the base and cat-calling and jeering to get my goat. I kept throwing over to Charlie Grimm at first and he would tag Maranville hard every time he dove back head first.

"About the tenth time I threw over to Grimm, Rabbit came back in head first and grabbed Grimm's ankle in his mouth and started toying with it like a baby with a new rattle.

"Grimm finally got loose and started hopping around on one foot, holding the bitten ankle. The spectators went into a mild frenzy and I was laughing so hard I had to turn away from the plate and walk toward second base.

"I couldn't have thrown that next pitch to save my life," said Root.

Urging increased collection and salvage of used tin cans, the War Production Board pointed out that every battleship contains 76 tons of tin.

Truman Asks 107 Million for Public Works

President Truman appealed to Congress yesterday for "prompt and favorable" action on a previous request for $107,500,000 to expand postwar planning of State and local public works.

The request, included originally in his September 6 message to Congress, involves 50 million dollars in appropriations and $57,500,000 in contractual authority for the Federal Works Agency.

In a letter to Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, Mr. Truman said it was his "earnest hope" that the committee give immediate consideration to the matter.

The appropriation now available for the purpose, he said, is "entirely inadequate."

Pi Kappa Alpha Plans $250,000 War Memorial

Chicago (U.P.).—Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity is building a $250,000 fund for a war memorial to honor its 12,000 members now in the armed forces and more than 200 who are dead or missing.

More than 30,000 members of the fraternity, founded 77 years ago at the University of Virginia, will be asked to contribute a $25 war bond each.

Maj. Roy D. Hickman, Birmingham, Ala., national president, has appointed Harold E. Rainville, Chicago, as director of the fund. Trustees are Milo J. Warner, Toledo, Ohio, chairman; Fletcher D. Richards, New York City, president of Campbell-Ewald Co., and A. E. Paxton, New York City, manager of McGraw-Hill publications. Warner is a past national commander of the American Legion.

Senator Wayne L. Morse of Oregon is chairman of the committee on site, which includes Gov. Clarence W. Meadows of West Virginia and Northwestern University football coach Lynn Waldorf.

Man-Hunting Ad Fetches Teachers

Springfield, Mo. (U.P.).—Gene E. Clark, principal at a Vaughn, N. Mex., school, figured the "man" appeal might do it.

His school needs teachers. So, on a visit here, he ran a classified ad in the local newspaper for two teachers with knowledge of mathematics, commerce, science or Spanish.

Then he added this attraction: "good deer, antelope and man-hunting."

Clark said most responses to the ad came from prospects who admitted they might not qualify to well on their knowledge of the courses mentioned but were convinced they could qualify 100 per cent in the man-hunting department.

Clark added that while the man-hunting line was a "psychological approach" it wasn't so much of a joke as it might sound.

"Last year," he said, "five out of 10 of our teachers got married during the first school term." And, he said, "they started from scratch at the beginning of the school year."

English Author Decries Realism School Poetry

Omaha, Nebr. (U.P.).—There's too much "brutal realism" and not enough sex in poetry to please Dr. Alfred Noyes, English poet and author.

The present-day realism school has "robbed realism of the true meaning of truth and supplanted truth with a superficial, sordid philosophy," Dr. Noyes said here recently.

The growth of totalitarianism—or the growth of "brutal realism"—has been revealed in literature in the past 20 years, he said, "and now we have it."

On the other hand, sex has "a place in nature and that should be its place in literature," Dr. Noyes said.

Pearl Harbor Quiz Snag Laid To Republicans

By the Associated Press

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) declared last night that "Republican politics" is interfering with the chances of a real Pearl Harbor investigation.

Republicans on the joint Senate-House inquiry group, he told reporters, want to be "private snoopers" rather than impartial investigators.

The investigation, Lucas continued, was "conceived in Republican politics, born in Republican politics and will die in Republican politics."

Lucas said Republicans are campaigning politically on Pearl Harbor, and he called this foolish, saying:

"A lot of these boys are going to be caught out on a limb when all the evidence is in." He declined to elaborate, but added:

"Let Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Brewster go off the deep end. They are just guessing and snooping around."

Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Brewster (R., Me.) have been arguing vigorously for the right of individual members to examine Government files on Pearl Harbor.

Brewster said in an interview today that partisanship within the committee was the Democrats' fault—that "it is very unfortunate we have come to this division."

Also, Ferguson told reporters he has been getting hundreds of telegrams from people all over the country.

"They want the truth," he said.

Lucas said the Democratic majority on the committee would not change its stand against one-man investigations. The committee meets tomorrow in executive session.

Lucas also said that full cooperation was being given Committee Counsel William D. Mitchell by the executors of the late President Roosevelt's estate and by Miss Grace Tully, his secretary, in connection with Roosevelt administration files.

President Truman reiterated to him yesterday, Lucas said, that the committee can have access to all of the Government's official files.

Stray Balloon Meets Match In Apple Tree

London, (U.P.).—George J. Alloway, who lives at Sunbury-on-Thames, became a hero by capturing a runaway balloon all by himself.

Alloway was sitting quietly in his parlor reading when the balloon floated 1000 feet over his house. His small children, long-accustomed to the sight of the captive balloons over London, had never seen one just floating along before.

David, aged 8 and June, aged 5, screamed "Daddy, Daddy . . ." with unusual violence and Alloway went out to find the children trying to catch the trailing cable of the balloon.

He shouted a warning for them to keep away.

Just then a smaller cable that the baloon had picked up in its wanderings, caught in the chimney of a nearby house.

Alloway seized the opportunity, caught the larger cable and wrapped it around the trunk of his apple tree after a considerable struggle.

A few seconds later the smaller cable snapped but Alloway's apple tree met the test and held fast.

Alloway, a little embarrassed by it all, informed the police of his capture. They, in turn, told the RAF who sent a crew of airmen and Waafs around with a truck and a winch to take the wandering balloon back home.

The airmen thanked Alloway and he went back to his book. Peace once again descended on Sunbury-on-Thames.

Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., celebrating its 150th anniversary this year, is the alma mater of three Senators. They are Wallace H. White and Owen Brewster, both of Maine and Harold H. Burton of Ohio — all Republicans. Brewster and Burton were roommates at the college.

In 1943 the disabling accident rate in the explosives and ammunition plants in the Central States area was 77 per cent lower than the nation-wide industry rate.

CIO Rejects 'Cost of Living' Wage Raise Proposed by GMC

Detroit, Nov. 7 (AP).—General Motors Corp. today offered a cost of living wage increase to its workers, and the CIO United Auto Workers Union promptly rejected the proposal.

The corporation had formally and flatly scorned the union's demand for a 30 per cent wage rate boost, terming the demand "excessive." Instead the corporation offered increases in classifications where, since 1941, wages have not been raised in proportion to the cost of living.

Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the UAW-CIO, declared that the union "flatly rejects the corporation's bribe offer because we will not be a party to sandbagging the American consumer."

At negotiation sessions today, Reuther said he asked corporation representatives "if they would offer us any increase—even 1 per cent—with the agreement that they would not seek price increases on the basis of the wage raise, and the corporation's answer was 'no.'"

The corporation's position was stated in a 34-page brief. The exact amount of increases would be determined through future negotiations with the UAW-CIO, General Motors said.

The labor leader also said GM had renewed its proposal that the UAW-CIO join with the corporation in seeking a revision of the Wage and Hour Act to provide for a standard 45-hour work week instead of the present 40.

General Motors "is just insane" if it thinks the Nation will go back to a 45-hour week, Reuther stated.

General Motors accused the union of "distorting the facts" in arriving at the conclusion that the "corporation was able to pay increased wages" and added that "prices and past and future profits are out of place in these wage negotiations."

Earlier Reuther, in a telegram to President Truman, asked that the fixing of ceiling prices on 1946 automobiles be withheld "pending a review by the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion."

Chinese Urged To Take Shots For Diseases

By Albert Ravenholt
United Press War Correspondent

American "Y" Force Headquarters on the Salween River Front.—Monsoon season is also malaria and typhus season on the Burma-China border, but American doctors have prevented expected epidemics among Chinese soldiers fighting in this sector.

American medical men administer booster shots for cholera, typhus and typhoid to hundreds of thousands of Chinese soldiers. Before American doctors entered the field, Chinese soldiers in this area died by the thousands from malaria.

The Salween Gorge is known throughout the world as one of the breeding places for mosquitoes carrying a deadly cerebral malaria which strikes with lightning speed.

All Chinese troops now receive prophylactic doses of atabrine. Entire plane loads of the malaria-curing drug have been flown in over the hump from India. Tiny "L" liaison planes fly the drugs continuously to forward landing strips west of the Kaoli Mountains, where American medics distribute it direct to Chinese divisions.

Chinese soldiers call atabrine "sour yellow pills," and at first hesitate to take them. With the help of Chinese commanding officers, American doctors are gradually inducing the Chinese soldiers to take the pills with their rice regularly.

Lawyer Scolded In Charter Case

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Alfred M. Thornhill was allowed to retain his license to practice law after a hearing before three judges in Hustings Court, but was severely reprimanded for "errors" leading to "association with organized gamblers."

Thornhill was charged by the Third District committee of the Virginia Star Bar with fraud in applying to the State Corporation Commission for a charter for a club "to promote social intercourse" and foster "literary and cultural subjects."

He was expelled by the Richmond Bar, which recommended, also that his license be suspended for six months. In two statements he was quoted as saying he backed a Richmond gambling club.

"We wish we could double our quota of new 1946 Packards!"

I have just returned from a trip to Detroit and a visit to the Packard factory.

Those new 1946 Packards are all that the Packard people say — and more!

The demand for any kind of car is going to be tremendous, but the demand for these Packards is going right out of sight.

As I told the Packard executives, "we wish we could double our quota of new 1946 Packards!"

We can't get enough to go around!

Much as we would like to promise a new Packard to everyone who wants one, we simply can't do it.

Packard's post-war production goal is double their best peacetime year. But even so, the demand will exceed supply by a wide margin.

Take good care of that car of yours!

Not everybody can get one of the first cars built. Some will have to wait—and some will have to wait longer than they think.

Keep your present car in A-1 running condition. Then you will be sure of good, reliable transportation until you can trade it in.

And remember — the better your car runs and looks when you trade it in, the more you will get for it.

We service all makes of cars. For the kind of service that will make your car run better, look better and last longer, bring it to Haley's.

Rubber Plants Disrupted by New Walkout

By the Associated Press

Akron's rubber industry, scene of numerous labor disputes in recent months, was beset by another yesterday that kept 10,000 persons out of production at two goodyear plants.

Late in the day, however, the company reported picketing by CIO United Rubber Workers had stopped at one plant and employes were returning.

Other major labor developments included:

1. Ford Motor Co. workers, last of the automobile industry's "big three," participated in a strike vote under the Smith-Connally Act.

2. The number of workers on strike or indirectly involved in stoppage totaled 275,000.

Work Hours Is Issue

A dispute between the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company and the CIO union over working schedules preceded the walkout at two of the company's five main plants. One was virtually shut down and the other partly inoperative, the company said.

Th emanagement termed the stoppage a strike but the union said it developed from a "company lockout." Clarence V. Wheeler, union official, said picketing was unauthorized and probably was a protest "of production gaps when they are at thei rmachines and for which they will not be paid."

The company has ordered machines shut down for two-hour intervals saying it was impossible "to allow production employes alraedy on a six-hour shift basis" to operate the equipment.

Last week an impartial umpire ruled the management might reinstate eight-hour shifts in departments where manpower shortages prevailed. The union contended the umpire was without jurisdiction over this issue and that a contract clause, suspended during the war, called for six-hour shifts.

General Motors and Chrysler Corporation workers have voted to strike to enforce their wage demands. The last balloting among the industry's "Big Three" began among approximately 80,000 Ford workers over the Nation. The votting, under National Labor Relations Board supervision, will extend through tomorrow.

At Washington, President Philip Murray of the CIO United Steel Workers announced acceptance of Secretary of Labor Schwellenbah's proposal for a resumption of wage negotiations with the United States Steel Corp.

The union seeks a $2 a day increase. The company has notified the union it cannot grant any increase until prices are raised on steel products.

The Lebor Department said it had received a reply to Schwellenbach's proposal from United States Steel and was considering it. A statement may be made tomorrow, the department added.

Schwellenbach designated Arthur S. Meyer, chairman of the New York Mediation Board, as special concilliator in the dispute. He asked the company and the union to resume bargaining immediately "in keeping with President Truman's speech of last Tuesday."

Doctor Honored

2 Area Men Decorated By Halifax

Two Washington area men, Maj. Gen. Warren F. Draper, 4710 North 25th st., Arlington, Va., and Maj. Gen. Benjamin M. Chidlaw, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., were among 36 Americans decorated yesterday by Ambassador Halifax on behalf of King George VI of England.

General Draper, chief of the public health, SHAEF, was made Honorary Companion of the Military Division of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath (C. B.) for keeping typhus under control and maintaining a good standard of health in liberated Europe. The citation credited him with giving "great assistance" to the British forces.

Before joining the Army, General Draper was assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service. He entered the Public Health Service immediately after graduation from the Harvard Medical School in 1910. Mrs. Draper and their two children live at the Arlington address.

General Chidlaw, USAAF, was made honorary commander of the military division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (CBE) for his air assistance to the Fifth Rrmy in Italy as commander of the XXII Tactical Air Command. On April 1, 1945, he became commander of the Mediterranean Allied Tactical Air Forces. He also commanded the Desert Air Force during the final phase of the Italian campaign. He was a pioneer in the development of jet propulsion.

Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, USN, superintendent of the United States Navay Academy was awarded the Honorary Knight Commander of the Military Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (KBE) for "highly distinguished services to the Allied cause in the war against Japan."

State Educators To Weigh Better Contest Methods

Charlottsvile, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.). A Literary Coaches' Conference, sponsored by the Virginia Hight School Literary and Athletic League, will bring more than 200 high school representatives to the University of Virginia on Saturday to confer with faculty members.

A series of conferences will be held to make possible an exchange of ideas between university faculty members and school representatives on raising standards in high school competition and improving the league's contribution to the schools. Instruction in league contest procedure and regulations will also be given.

Karl R. Wallace, head of the university's school of speech, will preside over the conference on public speaking, at which Miss Mary Waller Dickinson of the George Washington High School, Alexandria, will speak on how to prepare for contests in public speaking.

Similar conferences will be held covering other contest subjects.

MacArthur Thinks Emperor Aids Allies

Emperor Calls Diet to Meet December 24

Tokyo, Nov. 7 (AP).—Drastic reform shared the spotlight with imperial tradition today as Emperor Hirohito exercised his royal authority to call a regular session of the Diet while the nation's police chiefs pondered a program of democratization so radical it would use housewives to keep an eye on the corner cop.

Emperor Hirohito's imperial rescript called the Diet to meet December 24, but Kyodo News Agency said this might be superseded by an extraordinary session expected to convene December 10.

The government meanwhile gave Japan's once-domineering police system another shakeup by firing more than 5800 old-line enforcement and surveillance personnel. air0AeRshrdlucmfwypshrdlunupu

Kyodo said groups of 10 advisors each would be named for each of Tokyo's major police stations—where brutal third-degree methods formerly ruled. These advisors, the agency added, will include representatives of various professions and "middle-class housewives." The public will be asked to recommend candidates for such advisory boards, and in addition will be invited to voice criticism of police matters through letter boxes to be set up in each district.

Other developments on the occupation front:

Jiu-jitsu was wiped off the physical training program of Japanese schools. The ministry of education also abolished other Samurai-flavored courses in glider training, fencing and military drill.

A new political organization, the Japan Renovationist Party, came into existence, vaguely advocating elimination of feudalism and liberalization of Japanese economy, but upholding Tennoism (the emperor system) and opposing communism.

Still a Pleasure

Laramie, Wyo. (U.P.).—Girls on the campus at the University of Wyoming are whistling these days at the men students—what few of them remain. They aren't the wolfish type whistle, though. They are police whistles which the girls, who are members of the Spurs, use to warn anyone to keep off the grass.

Far Eastern Group Also Advised Jap War Trials Slated

By International News Service

The Far Eastern advisory commission was told officially yesterday that General MacArthur believes that Emperor Hirohito is doing a good job for the Allies.

John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, informed the commission behind closed doors of MacArthur's reaction, and also disclosed that 1500 to 2000 Japanese war criminals are under arrest and facing trials scheduled to start soon. He said MacArthur is anxious to get the trials started.

MacArthur was represented to the commission as believing that the retention of Hirohito has greatly aided the Allies in their occupation of Japan, and that his influence over the Japanese has brought about cooperation with the occupation forces.

McCloy stressed that Hirohito's messages to his subjects have brought about widespread submission to MacArthur's methods in ousting the Zaibatzu, the family monopolists, and in decentralizing political power.

McCloy returned recently from conferences with MacArthur in Tokyo.

Falls Church Must Expand, Munson Says

Falls Church either must expand and become a city of the second class, or give up its charter and become a part of Fairfax County.

Those were the alternatives presented to the Hillwood Citizens' Association by Archie Munson, a member of the Falls Church Town Council.

Munson said he is in favor of the annexation by Falls Church of areas adjacent to the town, declaring that an expanded city of Falls Church could "furnish cheaper Government than could Arlington County."

Munson told members of the Hillwood Association that Falls Church is "doing the best it can" under its present charter, but declared that the town should have additional powers of taxation and authority to operate its own school system if Falls Church is to keep pace with future developments. He advocated establishments of a city manager form of government for Falls Church.

The Hillwood Citizens Association, a militant group which has expressed its dissatisfaction on several occasions with progress of projected improvements in schools in the Falls Church area, has been openly advocated either annexation of the Falls Church area by Arlington County, or some change in local government by which citizens could achieve more benefits than they now receive from taxation.

Yamashita Cut Food Rations, Witness Claims

Manila (Thursday), Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Food rations for 4000 Allied nationals interned at Santo Tomas were reduced to starvation levels after Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita became Japanese commander in the Philippines, witnesses testified yesterday.

The story of Japanese bestiality at Santo Tomas was told after the prosecution had concluded testimony describing the brutalities inflicted in the Intramuros, Manila's ancient walled city, during the final days of the battle of Manila.

One witness told of a girl, sprawled among the dead and with her feet cut off, lifting her hand in the "V for Victory Sign." Another told of finding the bodies of priests and civilians, their hands tied and their bodies ripped by bayonets. Yamashita is on trial charged with criminal responsibility for the atrocities committed by his men.

The horrible days and nights at Santo Tomas, liberated last February by the U. S. First Cavalry Division, were described by former inmates of the Manila camp.

A. V. H. Hartendorp, elderly American editor of a Philippines magazine, testified that a copy of the rules of the Geneva Conference were smuggled into the camp. The Jap commander, shown it, said, "We do not recognize the Geneva Conference—we rule by Tokyo rules."

Hartendorp said the Japanese reduced food rations steadily after Yamashita's arrival in October, 1944, and that by December they were receiving approximately 625 calories daily, compared to a normal supply of 3000. He said at least eight persons were listed on death certificates as having died of starvation, but that many other deaths also were attributable to the same cause, although the Japanese gave other reasons.

Hartendorp said his own weight dropped from 170 pounds in 1941 to 106 when he was liberated.

Replying to a defense query if the internees had poultry available for food, Hartendorp brought laughter from the court by saying: "There were a few ducks but they also were starvedto death."

Lewis Herd Leads In Prince William

Manassas, Va., Nov. 7 (Spl.).—The herd of Francis M. Lewis, Manassas, led the Prince William County Dairy Herd Improvement Association in October with an average production of 40.5 pounds butter fat and 1095 pounds milk per cow, Harry Levine, local testing supervisor, announced this week.

The herd of Wilmer M. Kline, Manassas, was second with an average production of 39.6 pounds butter fat and 976 pounds milk.

Wheatley M. Johnson's Clover Hill Farm herd, Manassas, was a close third with 38.1 pounds butter fat and 696 pounds milk per cow.

Fourth was the J. C. Kincheloe No. 2 herd, Nokesville, with an average yield of 34.4 pounds butter fat and 921 pounds milk.

Georgetown Returns to College Basketball

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

This is the weekend of the showdown for four unbeaten teams—Army, Navy, Notre Dame and Columbia. By Saturday's sunset, it may be that Army alone is unbeaten. Navy catches a hot team in Michigan, and undefeated Columbia appears squarely up against it in the Penn game.

POVICH

Still the most intriguing game is Army vs. Notre Dame. Army coaches wish they could be as certain of a Cadet victory as the professional betters who are making them a 19-point favorite. Notre Dame is the mystery team of the season. Nobody knows yet how good the Irish are. They were accused of bowling over soft opposition before they came up to the Navy game, and then they outplayed Navy by a wide margin though being held to a 6-6 tie.

There's doubt that Army's line is as tough as Navy's first-string line, yet Notre Dame piled through the Middies' forwards for its first-quarter touchdown. Army has not encountered driving backs like Frank Rugerio, Elmer Angsman and Phil Colella this season. In some quarters, the 19-point edge conceded Army in the betting is regarded as the greatest overlay of the season. Notre Dame could even win the ball game, we think.

Army hasn't met up with a passer as skilled as Frank Dancewicz, either. The Michigan game demonstrated that Army is vulnerable to a passing attack. The young Wolverines were spreading panic in Army's secondary with their passes, and Dancewicz also knows how. The Irish have another incentive in addition to protecting their clean record. They'll be fighting to eradicate that greatest of all Gaelic disasters of last year when Army won 59-0.

Notre Dame's task is clear-cut enough. They'll have to stop Doc Blanchard inside the tackles and Glenn Davis outside. That has been the toughest job in college football the last two seasons. Against Navy, the Irish had to contend with no backs of the Blanchard-Davis type. Notre Dame's line will have to be up to its best game of the season, and that may not be good enough.

The Irish appear to be the best football team Army has taken on in two seasons. If the West Pointers get past this one, you can put down a second undefeated season for them with little disagreement.

Navy's supporters are still waiting for the Middies to play the good ball game they've supposed to come up with all season. It hasn't happened yet despite the glory of the 6-6 tie with Notre Dame. Navy was still a punchless outfit in that game, and got a tie only with its magnificent goal-line stand at the finish.

The Michigan game may produce better football by Navy. If it doesn't, the Middies no longer will rank with the unbeaten. Michigan, and its single wing, is the trickiest club the Navy will be meeting all year. Fritz Crisler's teen-age lads have been improving with every succeeding weekend and their crushing victory over Minnesota last Saturday is notice that Navy needs to be an improved team to win at Baltimore.

The Middies may get their improvement on Saturday from Bob Jenkins, the powerhouse fullback who has been on the sidelines for a month. Navy was at its best last year when Jenkins was teaming with Clyde Scott in operations behind a good Navy line. Jenkins' presence in the backfield also figures to improve the efficiency of Navy's passing attack.

In Franklin Field, unbeaten Columbia will be meeting in Penn a team that has won all of the last five games between the two schools. This year, Lou Little's Lions come up to the Penn game as the sensations of the Ivy League, with Gene Rossides spearheading the trickiest running-passing attack Little has ever produced at Columbia.

The game is expected to resolve itself into a battle between Little's backs and Penn's good, big line that pushed Navy around the field for three quarters. If that is, indeed, the basis of the battling then we like Penn's chances on the theory that a good line will win more games than a good backfield.

Rossides scored five touchdowns in Columbia's rout of Cornell but it's not certain that he'll be the best back on the field. Bob Evans, the former Air Force sergeant who does the passing, kicking and signal-calling for Penn is the most efficient back we've seen all year. We wish Columbia luck, with misgivings.

Recce Wins Jamaica 'Cap Before 21,535

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Nov. 7 (AP).—C. V. Whitney's Recce, a three-year-old daughter of Mahmoud which set the local six furlong track record last October 18, toyed with four rivals in the Florence Nightingale Handicap as the post-season eight-day victory meeting conducted by the five New York tracks opened before 21,535 fans this afternoon.

A $4.50 for two choice in the mile and a furlong, $10,000 added event, Recce clicked by four lengths in 1:50 3-5, one second slower than the track mark, and earned a purse of $6640. Isidore Bieber's Bertie S., Harry Guggenheim's Good Morning and William Woodward's Segula were bunched as named in the photo battle for runner-up honors with Silvestra a bad last. Recce, topweighted at 119 pounds, was ridden by Arnold Kirkland, the combination leading all the way.

Metropolitan tracks previously raised $686,560 this season for war relief and other charitable causes and expected the current session to add some $600,000. With such donations from tracks throughout the country expected to exceed five million dollars this year, racing's four year total would top 22 million dollars.

Segula tried to keep pace with the fleet Recce and did so for nearly six furlongs, the eventual winner being nursed along not more than a half length in front before making her pursuer falter. Recce opened up daylight beginning the stretch run and was merely breezing in the last furlong. Bertie S., third most of the trip, barely staved off Good Morning, while Segula had scant opposition from the sluggish Silvestra.

Va. to Battle Richmond in Homecoming

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 7.—Charlie Ellis, Virginia's T-formation quarterback, and three other Cavalier field generals are preparing offensive plays to serve up to Richmond when the Spiders come here Saturday for the annual "homecoming" game.

"Chunkin' Charlie" was tossing passes from close behind the line to all the first team backs and ends. In Virginia's five victories Ellis has passed 41 times and has had 24 completions for total gains of 475 yards.

The shiftfy Ellis, who is one of the slowest of Virginia's backs on a bee-line run, has also picked up 258 yards running with the ball for total net gains of 733 yards, an average of 136 yards per game.

What makes Ellis so valuable to Virginia's offense is his skill in directing the T-formation offensive used by the Cavaliers. He is highly regarded by Coach Frank Murray who artes him the best T-attack field general playing in any college this fall.

Gilly Sullivan, Fredericksburg, Va., Edward Mifflin, Washington, D. C., and Jim Wade, Asheville, N. C., are others handling the ball from the quarterback spot. Sullivan and Mifflin have been working with the team all fall though Sullivan hurt in practice, has not played since the victory over North Carolina State.

Wade is a member of the Navy trainee group that registered November 1, but he has shown such promise that Coach Murray hopes to make a quarterback of him in spite of the fact that he has never run except from the single-wing formation.

Mt. Vernon Routs Herndon by 38-0

Paced by End Holmes' expert pass-snatching, Mount Vernon gained undisputed possession of the Fairfax County high school grid championship as it defeated Herndon High, 38-0, yesterday at Falls Church.

Claiming the title after defeating all its Fairfax opponents, Mount Vernon accepted a challenge last week by Herndon, the only county team it hadn't played. And the Mounts were not to be denied yesterday, gaining a total of 343 yards and scoring in every period.

Holmes tallied five of the Mounts' touchdowns, two on passes from Tommy Florence, two on aerials from Nose Hartman, and another on a 12-yard surprise reverse. Hartman accounted for the other Mount Vernon touchdown on a 6-yard line plunge. Claude Cromp converted after two of the touchdowns.

Maryland Gets Rough Workout For VMI Clash

Head Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant sent his University of Maryland footballers through a rugged two-hour session yesterday in preparing for the invasion of Virginia Military Institute's Keydets Saturday in Byrd Stadium.

Again, the drills were centered around pass defense and offense and protection for punters. Weaknesses in these three departments set up touchdowns for William and Mary last Saturday when the Indians defeated the Terps, 33-14.

The Terps, who will be underdogs for the first time this season, will be meeting their fourth Southern Conference test, while for VMI it will be the fifth. Maryland has won only one league game this year—over Richmond—while the Keydets have emerged conquerors three times, bowing only to William and Mary.

Teammate a Close Second

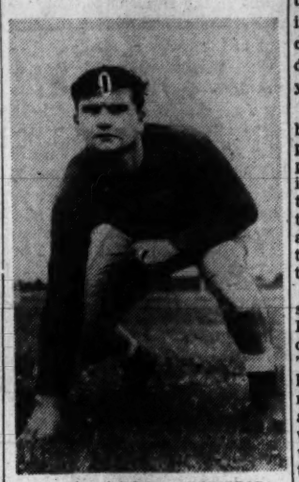

Irish Guard Mastrangelo Named 'Lineman of Week'

By Gayle Talbot

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—It was generally agreed after last week's Notre Dame-Navy game that the outstanding feature of the battle—not counting the daffy finish—had been the magnificent play of Notre Dame's two guards, Fred Roval and John Mastrangelo.

So it came as no great surprise when the country's sportswriters, doing a great job of splitting hairs, decided that Mastrangelo, a 19-year-old 200-pound sophomore, had won the week's Associated Press award as "Lineman of the Week."

* * * * * * *

JOHN MASTRANGELO

The youngster not only did much to pile up Navy's running game, but supplied many of the holes through which the Irish backs plunged for their touchdown on straight running plays in the opening period.

St. Mary's Ryan Ranks

He made a firm impression on Army's scouts, including Coach Earl Blaik, and it is a cinch that the Cadets' offense this Saturday will be concentrated outside the guards.

Another lineman upon whom much praise was heaped by Coast observers was Ed Ryan, an end for the unbeaten, untied St. Mary's Gaels, who played a big part in routing USC. In addition to playing a spectacular defensive game he recovered a USC fumble to set up a touchdown, caught several passes and gained 20 yards on an end around play.

Southern writers voted early and often for Kelley Mote, Duke end; Knox Ramsey, William and Mary tackle, and Gaston Bourgeois, Tulane guard. Three William and Mary touchdowns against Maryland were traced indirectly to Ramsey's smashing play. A key tackle by Bourgeois was credited with saving Tulane's victory over Mississippi State.

Max Morris Outstanding

Midwest observers said Max Morris, Northwestern end, played an outstanding game against victorious Ohio State. R. E. Blount, Texas end, caught a 33-yard pass for the game winner against S.M.U.

Other linemen who received at least one vote for sectional honors were:

Ends: Eugene Wilson, S. M. U.; R. W. Moyers, Texas Tech.; Leonard Ford, Michigan; Bill Leonard, Notre Dame; Bill Van Sandt, Utah.

Tackles: John Coppedge, Navy; Jim Lalikos, Holy Cross; Tom Dean, S. M. U.; Max Schnittker, Ohio State; Ed Mieszowski, Notre Dame; Mike Castronis, Georgia.

Guards: Art Gerometta, Army; Warren Amling, Ohio State.

Centers: Frank Sniadack, Columbia; Dick Scott, Navy.

Four Barred From Racing By N. Y. Body

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Nov. 7 (AP).—Marshall Cassidy, assistant secretary of the Jockey Club, announced here today that Joe Pepp, a trainer; Anna Pepp, his daughter and an owner, and Sala Kampf, have all had their respective licenses revoked and have been denied admission to all tracks operating under the jurisdiction of the Jockey Club for the remainder of the season.

Joseph Prinzo, who holds no license on New York tracks, has been denied admission to all tracks for the remainder of the season. The action was taken by order of the stewards of the Jockey Club and is for the following reasons:

Joseph Prinzo bought the horse named Detach from Charles Ferraro in September. On September 17 this horse ran in the name of Anna Pepp; on October 4 it ran in the name of Sala Kampf and later, in New England, ran in the name of Mrs. Vivian Pocorobo. On the two occasions when it ran in New York, first Anna Pepp and then Sala Kampf gave affidavits to the effect that they were the owner of the horse on this day. Prinzo still remains the rightful owner and the action against those concerned was taken for running a horse under false ownership. The stewards of the meeting refused further entry and referred the case to the stewards of the Jockey Club, who took the action noted above.

Conn's Manager Thinks He'll Win, Anyway

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 7 (U.P.)—Johnny Ray, manager of Billy Conn, predicted today that his fighter will "knock out" Joe Louis when they meet next June for the world's heavyweight championship.

"Conn shows the same natural ability and speed he always has possessed," Ray said. "I think he'll knock out Louis."

'Unknown' Tops N-S Golf Open at 139

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 7 (AP).—An unsung amateur, Lieut. Cary Middledorft of Memphis, scored his second subpar round today, to lead the professional aces at the halfway post in the North and South Open Golf Tournament, with 139.

While the first-day leaders, Benny Hogan and Denny Shute, blew themselves off the pace with 74s, the 24-year-old Tennessean fired a 3 under par 69 to 80 with his 70 of yesterday and grab a 1-shot lead.

The soft-spoken lieutenant, an Army dentist and a recent patient at the Valley Force (P.) Army Hospital, played al his shots well, but it was hisartistry on the greens that counted most—he required only 2 2putts. Hogan, from Hersey, Pa., and Shute, from Arkon, Ohio, was exployed 66s yesterday, had their troubles with the rugged No. 2 layout today, and wound up with two-round totals of 140, to tie for second position.

Turnesa Alone

Mike Turnesa of Knollwood, N. Y., whose 69 equalled today's low round by Middlecoff, Art Doering of Chicago and Dick Metz of Deal, N. J., was alone in fourth place with 141.

Sammy Snead, Hot Springs, Va., Doering and Gene Sarazen, New York, were bracketed at 142, with Metz and Bob Hamilton, Chicago, the defending champion, a shot back at 143. Forty-three players with 150 or better qualified for tomorrow's final 36 holes for the $5000 in war bond prizes.

The 6-foot-2, personable Middlecoff was the talk of the course. The lieutenant, who has won four Tennessee State Amateur titles and is recovering from a serious eye infection, tallied 35, 34—69 today, with one big six on each side.

Birdies Plentiful

After losing a stroke to par on the first hole, he banged out four straight birdies. Another string of three birdies starting with the twelfth hole clinched his place atop the pack.

Hogan was off to a good start with a 34 on the front nine, including three consecutive birdies, but ran into difficulties coming home. He had to ram down a 12-foot putt for a seven on the tenth after being trapped.

Shute, whose putting was marvelous yesterday, lost his touch today, missing three of less than a yard.

Chicago Show Stake To Edith Fable

Chicago, Nov. 7 (AP)Edith Fable, 6-year-old chestnut mare owned by Miss Jean McLean of Portsmouth, Va., last night won the $1000 preliminary stake at the Chicago Horse Show, thus becoming a favorite to take the $2000 grand championship in the class for three-gaited saddle horses.

'Skins Regain Stralka for Yank Game

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer.

Clem (Little Bull) Stralka, who went from Georgetown University to become one of the finest guards in the National Football League, came back to the Redskins yesterday, a welcome surprise, after three years in Uncle Sam's Navy.

The "Little Bull," 31, so called because of the tremendous strength packed into his 5-foot-10-inch, 235-pound frame (225 playing weight) immediately signed a two-year contract, worked out with such vigor that Coach Dud DeGroot immediately announced Clem would be in the line-up Sunday here against the Boston Yanks.

The former Georgetown University All-District guard joined the Redskins in 1938 after three years of regular play with the Hoyas in '35, '36 and '37, captaining the team his final year. At once, in his freshman pro year, he became a regular and played five straight years. He was on the 1942 championship team which football men insist produced the four greatest guards ever assembled on one club—Steve Slivinski, Dick Farman, Clyde Shugart and, of course, Stralka.

In Service Games

Clem has been playing football quite a bit in the Navy and only recently played in an all-star game in Honolulu.

The return of Stralka increases the Redskins roster, which has been bouncing up and down like the thermometer of late, to 32, one under the league limit.

Stralka couldn't have come at a more opportune time as far as the Redskins are concerned, going into their game Sunday against the Yanks, only club in the league which has whipped the locals in championship play. The Yanks have four of the best ball carriers in pro ranks in Johnny Martin, Johnny Grigas, Pug Manders and Bob Davis. One of the best defensive guards ever to hit the pro ranks, Stralka will get quite a workout in his '45 debut under fire.

Defense Stressed

Meanwhile, Coach DeGroot was drilling his worthies in a special and what he hopes a versatile defense good enough to stop the Yank mail carriers, who will have Boris "Babe" Dimancheff, former Purdue All-American, in their midst for the first time this year.

Dimancheff, who gives the Yanks speed on the outside (a thing which has been their main drawback this year), is the same fellow who ripped Navy's line to shreds last year with Purdue's Boilermakers at Baltimore. Dimancheff, who hurt his leg in a preseason scrimmage, was scheduled to start last week against the Lions, but was withheld due to the sloppy turf in favor of a fast track, which is expected Sunday. All of which means the Redskin ends will have to be on their toes at all times with Dimancheff, Grigas and Davis in the same backfield.

Also a cause for particular defense attention is one Clarence "Ace" Parker, former Duke All-American who is just now beginning to round into the shape that made him one of the pro game's outstanding performers with the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Scotty Gudmundson, former George Washington University passer who was once Redskin property.

Gudmundson contributed to the Redskins' 28-20 downfall in Boston with a touchdown pass to Don Currivan and otherwise conducted himself like a big leaguer. With Parker and Gudmundson, the Yonks now will havea capable passer in the lineup at all times.

Mort Cooper's 'Change' Brings Divorce Suit

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 7 (U.P.)—Charging that fame had made a changed man of her husband, Mrs. Bernadine Cooper today asked a divorce from Pitcher Morton Cooper of the Boston Braves. She asked custody of their 8-year-old son, Lonnie; alimony, support for the boy, and attorney fees.

Cooper, who was rated one of the best pitchers in baseball until he injured his elbow last season after being traded to the Braves by the St. Louis Cardinals, had a violent temper and at times his "attitude was so threatening" she feared for her own safety, Mrs. Cooper said in the petition.

He spent money lavishly on entertainment and frequent pleasure trips without making allowances for the future of either their son or herself, she charged further, adding that while she made allowances for his "excesses and many broken promises," she learned that he expected it of her. They were married October 14, 1936.

Tribe Won't Win In '46, Says Lou

Cleveland, Nov. 7 (AP).—Spring and baseball are a long way off, but Manager Lou Boudreau already has issued one forecast—his Cleveland Indians won't cut any fancy capers in the 1946 pennant chase.

The tribe pilot is convinced of two things:

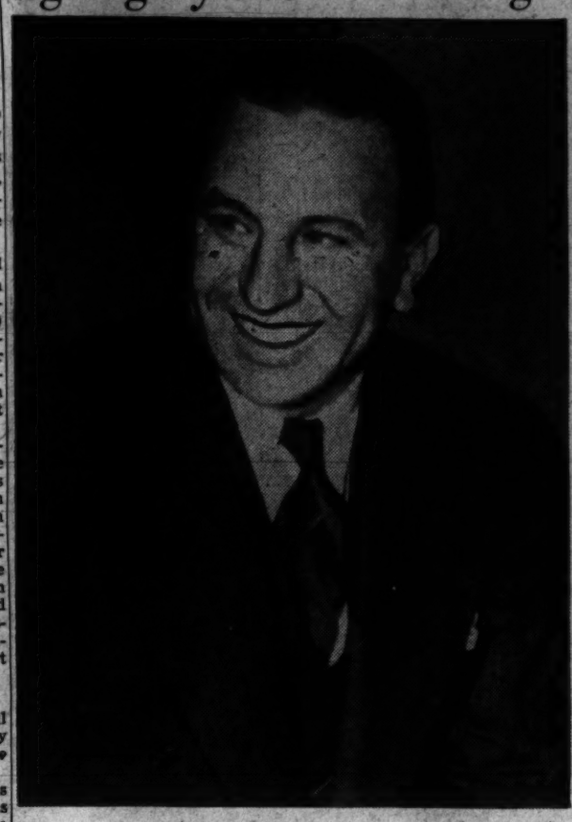

Two years will be required to develop the Indians into a pennant threat.

The club must expand its farm and scouting system to get its share of the youngsters who will be returning from the armed forces.

"It looks to me," Boudreau said, "as if the Yankees and the Red Sox will be very tough next season."

'Worries Wiped Out for '46'

Sam Breadon Pleased Over Signing Dyer as Card Manager

Eddie Dyer, new manager of St. Louis Cardinals.

By Harmon W. Nichols

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 7 (U.P.)—Sam Breadon, who doesn't waste much time fretting anyway, said tonight that signing Eddie Dyer as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals wiped out all his worries for 1946.

"Hi ya pal" Dyer, a veteran of 20 years in the far-flung properties of the Redbird chain of minors, replaces Billy (The Kid) Southworth, who begged off his 1946 contract to accept a similar position with the Boston Braves.

Bredon, one of the shrewdest traders in the baseball mart, was in a holiday mood as he announced his choice of Dyer today.

"I have given Eddie a two-year contract," he said. "I don't know anyone else I could have obtained who is a better judge of players. I have respected his advice through the years he has been in our organization and have admired his work. Besides he won't be a stranger to many of our players—he developed most of them."

Dyer Likewise Jubilent

At Houston, where Edwin Hawley Dyer conducts a lucrative oil business with his brother, the new manager likewise was jubilant.

"We'll be hard to beat next year," Eddie told anyone who asked.

"If I get all our kids back from the service you can count on the Cards having a pretty rough ball team."

Dyer admitted it would be hard to fill the shoes of Billy The Kid, who skippered the Cardinals to National League titles in 1942, 1943 and 1944 and to world titles against the New York Yankees in 1942 and the St. Louis Browns in 1944.

"But," said Eddie, "I'd be a pretty sorry man if I didn't think I could do a good job, too."

Resignation of Southworth came as a surprise to the baseball world—including Breadon, himself.

Billy Contacted During Series

Breadon said today that as late as September 24, the day the Cardinals pulled out of St. Louis on their last road trip, he and Billy had a long "bull session" about the prospects of the team in 1946.

"I'm sure Billy had no idea of quittin gthen," Breadon said.

It was assumed that Southworth had been contacted by the Braves high command during the recent world series. Breadon said that shortly after he returned from the final game of the series in Chicago he received a phone call from Southworth from his home in Ohio.

"Billy asked to be released and said he had a flattering offer from Boston. I asked him to give me a little time to think it over," the Card owner said. "And right then and there, the first man who came to my mind was Eddie Dyer."

Dyer Was Hurler

Smiling, jovial Eddie began a career as a southpaw pitcher with the Cardinals at their farm club in Syracuse in 1922, and hurled for the Cardinals. From late 1923 until July 1927 when his arm went limp and ruined what might have been a brilliant pitching career.

These followed years during which he was manager, scout and overseer of Cardinal chain farms.

Terms of Eddie's new contract were not involved. It was reported that Southworth received $20,000 from the Cardinals and that Eddie's pay will be "at least that."

Billy the kid most certainly did not go to Boston for less money—not with the Cardinals almost sure to be up there within cutting distance of the World Series' melon for the next two or three years.

Minor Leagues Drafting Opens

Durham, N. C., Nov. 7 (AP).—Louisville of the American Association got the contract of Tommy West, outfielder for Richmond of the Piedmont League, as the Class AA minor league drafting period opened today.

Toronto of the International League drafted the contract of Pitcher Byron Cook who won 16 and lost 9 for Atlanta in the Southern Association last season.

Drawing by lot was necessary in each case as Newark of the International sought West and Buffalo, also of the International, sought Cook.

Very Lucky . . .

Breadon Goes Merrily On as 'Horse Trader'

St. Louis, Nov. 7 (AP).—Sam Breadon, who has exploded more "baseball bombshells" than any other major league owner during his 26 years of directing the St. Louis Cardinals, today summarized his "David Harum" career in two brief sentences:

"I've been a very lucky man. I hope I can continue to be."

Surprisingly jovial for a man who has just lost "the best manager in baseball," the Cardinal owner beamed as he talked of the 1946 season.

"Eddie Dyer is a fine man with a splendid record. I'll have no worries about my manager next year. When Billy (Southworth) told me he wanted to leave, I didn't know what I was going to do. I was left high and dry. But we're all set now."

An Old Story

Surprising announcements such as Southworth's release have been coming from Breadon's office ever since he fired Branch Rickey as manager in 1925 and then set him up as director of what was to become baseball's first and most extensive farm system.

At the peak of his success in 1942, Rickey was let out of the Cardinal organization.

Between those Rickey deals, Breadon hired and fired Rogers Hornsby although the "Rajah" had led the club to its first National League pennant. Bill McKechnie was in and one with a pennant in between. Frankie Frisch and his "Gashouse Gang" became a baseball byword and then Frisch later was fired as manager in mid-season. Finally, Dizzy Dean and his sore arm was peddled to the Chicago Cubs for $185,000 and three players.

Past History

"Some of those deals were good for us and some weren't," Breadon recalled. "They're all history and I don't like to talk about them. I've tried to forget the bad ones.

"I've done so much 'horse-trading' that I was bound to make some boners and get some good ones. When I do get a good one, I know I've been lucky."

Strangely, the transaction which the Red Bird owner classes as his worst didn't directly involve the St. Louis club. That was the waiver of Dutch Leonard, now with Washington, out of the National League in 1936.

"It really hurts to think we could have had him for only $7500."

What about all the Cardinal stars returning from the armed forces for 1946? Would any be sold, and who? Which members of the 1945 club are assured of jobs?

Breadon brushed away the questions with a broad smile.

"It's too early to answer any of those," he said.

And "Dutch Harum" turned back to his desk and went to work. No doubt weighing what he has against what someone else might want to offer.

Hoyas Card 11 Contests, Open Dec. 1

Rev. Matthew Kane, Georgetown University's athletic director, last night signaled the return of the Hoyas to intercollegiate sports competition after a 2½-year absence by announcing the Hilltoppers' 1945-46 basketball schedule.

The Hoyas open the season, December 1, in Baltimore at Loyola College and play their first local game against the Army War College, December 12. The 11-game slate also includes a home-and-home seris with Loyola, Fort Meade, Scranton University and Catholic University. Boston College will meet Georgetown here on January 19. Several other games ar still pnding.

Officials at the Hilltop school are still uncertain as to where their team will play its home games, but expect to reach an agreement with one of the local gymnasiums in a few days.

Georgetown's last basketball aggregation captured the National Collegiate A. A. Eastern championship in Madison Square Garden in 1943.

Father Kane revealed that Ken Engles, 6-foot, 2-inch star of the 1940-41 Hoya team, had returned as layerp-coach, and would remain at the helm for at least this season. Since the first call to practice in mid-October, when 50 candidates reported, the squad has been cut to 20, with another cut impending.

So far, two District lads have distinguished themselves in the early sessions. They are Ernie Ornstein, former Central star, and Don Durkin, who played for St. John's a few years ago. Other standouts are Tom Galla, 6-foot, 2-inch former all scholastic at Bridgeport, Conn.; Joe Daly, all city ace at Fordham Prep in New York City, and Charlie Hagan, idscharged veteran from Brooklyn.

The schedule:

December 1, Loyola College, Baltimore; 5, Fort Meade, Fort Meade; 12, Army War College, War College; 15, Scranton U., Scranton.
January 7, Loyola College, home; 12, Scranton U., home; 15, Fort Meade, home; 19, Boston College home; 25, Army War College, home.
February 2, Catholic University, C. U.; 23, Catholic University, home.

Sweden Looks Into Status of Its Amateurs

Stockholm, Nov. 7 (U.P.)—Some of Sweden's star athletes, including Gundar Hag gand Arne Anderson, are being investigated by the Swedish Athletic Association to determine whether they have violated the amateur code in financial transactions, it was disclosed today.

Described as the biggest purge in Swedish sports history, the association was attempting to uncover all money transactions between the clubs and the athletes. The Malmoe newspaper, Atbetet, reported that the inquiry already has revealed that one club paid its athletes 1000 kroner (about $240), in violation of the amateur rules.

Andersson, the Stockholm newspaper Morgontidningen said, has discontinued his training for a proposed tour of the United States next summer, pending outcome of the investigation. Hagg and Andersson are ranked as among the greatest distance runners of al lime and hold numerous world records.

The investigation was ordered by Bo Lindman, chairman of the Swedish Athletic Association, and Bo Ekelund, Swedish representative on a number of international sports groups. They said the purge was a "painful necesisty in order to save Swedish sports and their international reputation."

Three-Year Contract Lured Southworth to Boston

By Bill King

Boston, Nov. 7 (AP).—A 3-year contract, which he described today as "the opportunity that comes to a baseball manager only once in his career," tempted Billy Southworth to leave the highly successful St. Louis Cardinals to direct the rebuilding of the lowly Boston Braves.

Neither Southworth nor the Braves' officials would divulge the salary terms but it is likely that he will draw around $30,000 a season. His St. Louis salary was said to have been $20,000.

"I'm going to work 24 hours a day to give Boston a winning ball club," Southworth, one of the major league's most successful managers, promised. "There is a big job to be done here. The club has many able players and it is up to me to get the best out of them."

Southworth then explained that President Lou Perini of the Braves, first approached him to succed Del Bissonette as his club's manager during the World Series in Detroit.

"I told Mr. Perini that my contract with the Cardinals did not expire until after 1946 and I could not discuss the matter," Southworth said. "I understand that Mr. Perini talked to Sam Breadon, the Cardinals' president, in Chicago and that the latter, convinced that I would be improving myself, granted permission for me to accept the Braves' offer.

"I always will be grateful to Mr. Breadon."

Southworth is an old-time Boston favorite, for he came to the Braves from Pittsburgh back in 1921 in a deal for Rabbit Maranville, along with two other players and $15,000 in cash.

Southworth, while running down the Braves' roster and the list of its players in the service, cited many he considered to be verging on stardom. But he did appear concerned about his new club's weak farm system.

Asked how much importance he placed on a strong farm system, he replied, "The Yankees and Cardinals have the best ones and they're generally the best clubs in the majors."

Foul Claim On Winner Disallowed

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer.

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 7 (AP).—H. L. Straus' Quarter Moon ran 6 furlongs in 1;11 4-5 here this afternoon in the $10,000 added Heiser Handicap but it took more than 15 minutes to seal his victory.

Jockey Mike Basile, whose mount E. C. Eastwood's Challamore was beaten a nose in a thrilling photo finish, claimed a foul against Jockey Herb Claggett who rode Quarter Moon. Basile based his objection on being caught in close quarters between Quarter Moon and New Moon, entry mates, soon after the start. New Moon finished last in the field of four with N. Newmeyer's Turbine third.

Although few in the crowd of 14,556 knew either the cause or the merit of Basile's foul claim, the officials took a terrific booing when they allowed the finish to stand. To add to the disappointment of Challamore bettors, the photo finish picture showed the rivals only a lip apart.

Entry Pays $3.40

The Straus entry was the favorite and backers of the two horses, both from the mare Ladyinthemoon, received $3.40 for the usual $2 investment.

Quarter Moon was first to forge to the front and always appeared to have a clear lead over his rival. Neew Moon, weighted with 130 pounds, flashed some speed and stopped. Turbine rallied mildly to be third. However, Challamore came on through the stretch, under vigorous handling, and many believed the 8-year-old son of Challenger had gotten up in time for the decision.

The victory ended a string of three seconds for Quarter Moon and brought him $7975 in earnings to make his 1945 total $20,310.

Alexis Rallies To Win

Christiana Stables' Alexis came through with a stretch drive that could not be denied in the seventh race which drew a field of four for a battle of a mile and a sixteenth. Vincent Cicero's Royal Flush was second, beaten three parts of a length. Two and a half lengths behind the place money came the Pentagon Stables' The Doge, the favorite in the vestpocket field. Alexis paid $7.20, was well handled by Jockey Ken Scawthorn, and was clocked in 1:45 2/5.

The daily double on the "5 and 7" combination of Dr. Johnson, a $9 winner of the first race and Sweep In, a $4.40 favorite, in the second paid $33.30. The winning tickets numbered 1690.

Kentucky Grid Plans Are Big

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 7 (AP).—Definite plans to pull Kentucky out of football's tail-end class and put the school on an equal footing with its Southeastern Conference opponents are underway, Dr. H. L. Donovan, University president, said today.

The plans call for hiring a "name" coach to take over next season.

Several successful mentors, including John Barnhill of Tennessee and Henry Frank of Tulsa, have been "mentioned" as possible candidates under the Kentucky "recovery plan," but Dr. Donovan said the school had not started negotiations with anyone.

Athletic Director Bernie Shively is head coach of the current Kentucky team under a "duration agreement."

New Yorker Builds Business Upon Love for Old Music

New York (AP).—Jack L. Caidin makes a living strictly off the record.

He owns and manages one of the few phonograph shops dealing exclusively in records regarded as collectors' items. He is a recognized authority on rare recordings and also has an intimate knowledge of all the operatic stars, past and present.

His shop, on the outskirts of the theatrical section of Broadway, is a little hole in the wall, piled high with approximately 30,000 platters, none of them modern. What little wall space remains is studded with autographed photographs of opera singers, many of them dead more than a quarter of a century.

"The value of the records for collectors' libraries," Caidin says, "is not determined by the original recording date, but how many are in existence.

"Countless persons have dashed into my shop breathlessly, clutching Caruso records stamped near the turn of the century. They believe these records are worth their weight in beefsteak, but actually Caruso records are, figuratively speaking, a dime a dozen and nearly every phonograph owner in the country has at least one."

One of the most valued private recordings owned by Caidin was made by Lillian Russell in 1912. Caidin last year discovered the only known recording made by the Jersey Lily. He values the record at $1000.

The record collecting germ isn't particular whom it infects. Actors, lawyers, street cleaners and policemen all have felt the sting. Once they start, Caidin says, there is no end to it.

Golden Wedding Pictures Hobby of College Dean

Laramie, Wyo. (U.P.).—Dean J. A. Hill, wool expert who is an instructor in the College of Agriculture at the University of Wyoming, believes that the longer married persons live together, the more they grow to look alike.

That's the basis for his hobby, which is collecting pictures of couples celebrating their golden wedding anniversaries, or better.

Dean Hill says he doesn't remember just how he did start collecting anniversary pictures, but he admits that it serves at least one useful purpose—that of keeping in touch with friends, "many of whom I wouldn't hear from unless they send along a picture once in awhile."

Shoremen's Cage Prospects Good

Chersertown, Md., ..ov. 7 (AP).—With a full basketball team back from last season, Coach Henry Carrington of Washington College confidently awaits his opening contest at Fort Miles November 26.

The Shoremen's squad of 24 players constitutes approximately one third of the school's male enrollment.

Tallest of his regulars is 6-foot-4 Steve Abramson, but the Rook brothers, Gene and Jim, also top the 6-foot mark. Other veterans, Dick Smith, George Hauver and Bill Cooper, stand less than 6 feet.

Of newcomers to the team, former Marine Dick Lynch figures to crash the regular lineup. Other servicemen who also may turn the trick are Duncan Derringer, Clayt McGran and Joe Sutton.

Among the freshmen possibilities are Henry Lewis, Turner Weise, Bill Shields, Marty Chaiken, Jack Coleman and John Livingood.

San Antonio 'Boysville' Plans Expansion Plan

San Antonio, Tex. (U.P.).—A program to expand San Antonio's "Boysville" has been announced by Don F. Holiman, founder and general manager of the institution established to "provide a home for care and understanding of abandoned boys."

The present capacity of "Boysville" is 20 boys, but when the expansion program calling for a new two-story building with dormitories, recreation facilities and vocational training quarters is completed, "Boysville" expects to be able to welcome 55 new homeless boys.

Clemson Seen As Toughest Foe for VPI

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 7 (AP).—Backfield Coach Gene McEyer has told Virginia Tech gridders that they can expect to meet their toughest opponent of the current campaign Saturday when they travel to meet the Clemson Tigers.

The Gobbler mentor has been scouting for Tech and he rates Clemson a mighty foe for the Techmen. However, he told the Gobblers they can turn the tables on the Tigers by playing heads-up football.

The Techmen have been a "hot and cold" team all season, probably due to the youth of the squad members. Against the University of North Carolina, Maryland, and Virginia, they showed signs of offensive power, but in the William and Mary and North Carolina State tilts they seemed to lack the drive noticed in the other battles.

There is a strong element of local fans who think the Gobblers might upset the Tigers should they play as well as they played in upsetting Maryland.

Ralph Jenkins, expected to be the third All-American in Clemson's history, is the key defensive man for the present Tiger eleven. He plays the center spot and many say he rates as the best pivot man in the South if not in the country.

Buffalo Seeks Champ

Buffalo, ... Y., Nov. 7 (U.P.).—Promotor Jack Singer said today, that he had offered Light Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich $30,000 to defend his title against Phil Muscato of Buffalo. Singer said he had wired the offer to Lew Diamond, Lesnevich's manager, and had suggested January 15 as a possible date for the bout.

Man, 31, Former Drunk and Wife-Beater, Is Courting Girl, 20, Although Not Yet Divorced; Her Parents Deplore Situation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please give me your opinion of the following situation: My daughter, 20, became acquainted with a man, 31, less than three months ago and they have been going out together constantly ever since.

My husband and I are very worried about this affair, as the man is waiting for a divorce which cannot be brought to court before next Spring at the earliest, because his co-respondent is overseas. We think he should wait until he is free before asking a girl to marry him.

Many Disapprove Man's Behavior

I HAVE talked with some very responsible people about this and they all seem to agree that his conduct is not right. But our daughter is very trustful of him. Nothing anybody can say makes any difference. She believes everything he tells her, although I fear he is not telling her the truth.

I have talked with his former wife, who told me that he used to get drunk and abuse her at times. But he says he has changed since going overseas five years ago. Do you think that is possible?

C. E.

See No Signs Of Principle

DEAR C. E.: If this man, 31, was a drunkard and wife-beater at the age of 26—five years ago, when he went overseas,—then your 20-year-old daughter is playing around with a pretty tough customer. That's my opinion.

And what's this about his "co-respondent" in the divorce suit? Is he discarding his wife on grounds of adultery, thus climaxing private abuse with public disgrace? Or is she airing that charge against him? Has he been flagrantly unfaithful? In either case, you have more evidence of a very shabby character, who in the final analysis has no decency in relation to women, who can behave without scruple or pity when it suits his purpose.

Also, his torrid pursuit of your young daughter, a performance which conspicuously links her name with his at a time when he is still legally tied, with a lot of dirty linen to be washed out in court eventually, is proof again that his least concern is the general well being of whatever woman he wants or attracts.

Same Scalawag He Was Before

I THINK he is an utterly undisciplined personality, probably not very bright, whose philosophy of life is: "Get what you want when you want it, or as much as you can, and never mind who gets hurt in the scramble." I think his hedonist defiance of your proper sentiments in this matter—a defiance which extends, no doubt, to using his influence on the gullible girl to persuade her to ignore your opinions likewise,—means that he hasn't changed in the least since going overseas. That he has, if anything, grown more cynical, hard-boiled and self serving than before.

It is said, "Experience keeps a dear school but fools will learn in no other." And since your headstrong daughter will accept no instruction from you, nor give heed to the consensus opinion of those responsible persons you have consulted, there is naught to do but let events teach her that she fell for a hoax in thinking him fine.

Twist, Bend To Acquire Small Waist

By Ida Jean Kain

There is no getting away from it, a trig waist is all that stands between any girl and a middle-aged figure.

A dumpy waist, measuring around 4 inches less than the bust circumference, is unmistakably the sign of middle-age spread. A difference of 6 inches gives more claim to symmetry. But a snug waist that measures 8 or 9 inches less than the bust is youthful.

Position: Stand erect, arms stretched up overhead, feet apart.

Movement: Pull up first with one arm, then the other, pulling slim along one side, concentrating the pull through the middle of the figure. Repeat six times, relax and repeat six more.

Add a side bend. Exercise 2:

Position: Standing, an arm's length out from the wall, feet apart, arms upstretched above head.

Movement: Bend to the side, until you can touch fingers to the wall . . . repeat three times, reverse sides and repeat three times. Do not let hips jut out to the sides as you bend.

Now, stretch, twist, bend! Exercise 3:

Position: Standing, feet wide apart, arms straight out at sides.

Movement: Stretch through middle, twist, and, bending sideward, touch the fingers of one hand to the toes of the other foot, holding the up-pull through the midriff. Back to position, swirl at waist and bending, touch fingers to other toes. Eight times will do.

If you wish other exercises, send for the leaflet, "Waistlines and Beltlines," inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, to Ida Jean Kain, The Washington Post.

Action Unit Protests Passage of UNRRA Appropriation Bill

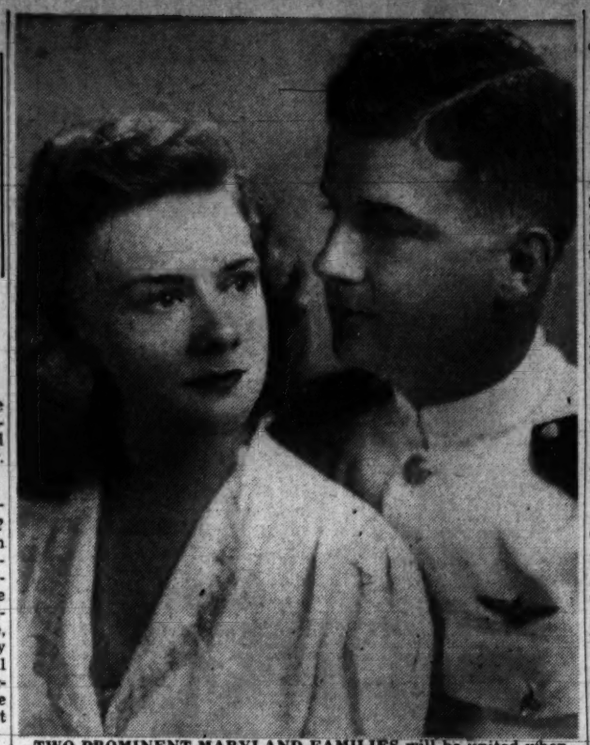

Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, national chairman of the Women's Action Committee for Victory and Lasting Peace, has set forth the policy of this organization regarding the deficiency appropriation for UNRRA in a telegram sent to Senatdrs O'Mahoney, Hayden, McKellar and Bridges of the Appropriations Committee:

"The Women's Action Committee for Victory and Lasting Peace, representing 12 national women's organizations and about eight million women, protests the House passage of the UNRRA appropriation bill with the free press amendment. While we are wholeheartedly in favor of freedom of the press, we deplore the fact that nonself-governing peoples will starve to death because they live in areas where access to news is denied the press.

"Furthermore, and this is most important, we feel that an attempt on the part of any national legislature to lay down policies for a world organization sets an extremely dangerous precedent. This country should proceed on the assumption that when it joins an international organization it must legislate within the organs of that organization. If this country undertakes to legislate unilaterally, other members of the international organization will undoubtedly follow suit. This will certainly lead to failure in international administration."

Dr. Cardwell AAUW Speaker; Edgar Mowrer, Wife to Talk

Dr. Guy Cardwell, head of the English department of the University of Maryland, will speak at the November meeting of the College Park Branch, American Association of University Women, Monday at 8 p. m. in the Maryland room of the Home Economics Building on the campus.

Dr. Cardwell will discuss the new program of studies in American civilization at the university. Mrs. R. O. Stelzer, education chairman, is in charge of the meeting.

Hostesses for the social hour which will follow will be Mrs. C. R. Wilcox, Mrs. W. P. Green, Mrs. G. M. Briggs, Mrs K. M. Stampp, Miss R. K. Taube and Mrs. L. J. Olivier.

With a membership of 150 women, the branch has ten study groups including international relations, book review, choral singing, creative writing, child study, handicrafts, drama, bridge, social studies and Bible study.

Authors Will Speak

Mrs. Lilian Mowrer and Edgar Ansell Mowrer, author-lecturers, will be guest speakers at the monthly meeting of the Professional Writers' Club, Monday at 8 p. m. at the YWCA. Their topic will be "A Column in Action."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Mowrer have written and traveled extensively. For 30 years, while Mr. Mowrer was a foreign correspondent, they lived and wrote in European capitals, including Rome, Berlin, and Paris, and made extended trips over the Continent and to the Far East.

Mrs. Mowrer's book, "Riptide of Aggression" is required reading at Harvard and her autobiography "Journalist's Wife," published in 1937, was a best seller. Mrs. Mowrer is now District chairman of the women's action committee for lasting peace. Mr. Mowrer, who served for a while as deputy director of OWI, is a newspaper columnist, political analyst and commentator, and author of numerous books, among which is the Pulitzer prize winner, "Germany Puts the Clock Back."

The speakers will be introduced by Miss C. Virginia Diedel, president. Hostesses will be Mrs. Hugh Allen, Miss Kathryn Casey and Mrs. Dorothea Sheats. A short business meeting and recess at 7:30 p.m. will precede the program. The public is invited.

Fall Weather Dictates Heartier Meals

The year is on the turn, so are menus. When milkweed pods get fat and silvery, when hedges thin and the trees are a riot of color, then we start drifting toward heartier meals.

Buckwheat and sausages for breakfast, sturdy bean soup for luncheon and some of those boiling kettle partners for dinner. Meals can't be monotonous when the cook makes what grandmothers called "boiled dinners." Grandmother called it "boiling," but she really simmered the food on the back of the stove. That's why she became so famous for dishes that were tender and flavorsome.

To mention a few boiling kettle partners—the meat to be simmered below the boiling point until tender and the vegetables added just long enough before serving time to allow them to be cooked—you have corned beef and cabbage, beef brisket and spices, pork and sauerkraut, chicken and dumplings, stew and dumplings, salt pork and string beans or navy beans, hog jowl and black-eyed peas, lamb with lima beans, giblets with rice, lamb shanks and barley and chicken and noodles.

Beef is back, so consider a beef stew. Dash the stew with red wine for additional flavor and tenderness and then you serve it ring around the casserole with fluffy mashed potatoes. This is an easy main dish to prepare. And if there is any stew left over you can top it with pastry and have a second grand meal from the one cooking of meat.

Dinner Menu

Beef Stew Mashed Potato Topping
Grapefruit-Avocado Salad
Crusty Rolls Butter
Ice Cream
with Frozen Red Raspberries
Coffee

While the vegetables may be varied in the stew, this recipe gives a wide variety and you can change them to the desired ones.

BEEF STEW

Cut 2 pounds of beef stew meat into cubes and dredge in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Heat 2 tablespoons meat-drippings in skillet and brown the meat. Rinse the frying pan with boiling water and add this liquid to kettle. Cook at simmering point until meat is tender—about 2 hours. In the last 45 minutes of cooking add 6 small onions, two thirds cup diced turnips, two thirds cup cubed carrots, ½ head of cabbage leaves separated, salt and papper to taste. Thicken the stew with ¼ cup flour mixed with ¼ cup cold water, add and cook for five minutes.

Pour into serving dish and surround with mashed potatoes. Serves 6 generously.

Dinner Menu

Chicken with Dumplings
Sweet Potato Pudding
Peas Cold Slaw
Hot Rolls Apple Butter
Pumpkin Pie Coffee

Chickens are plentiful now, so you'll have no difficulty in buying a 4 or 5 pound one. Get your bird and then proceed in this way:

CHICKENS WITH DUMPLINGS

Place a disjointed chicken in a deep kettle, adding hot water to cover. Add 1 teaspoon salt and 3 celery stalks, cut up, 1 diced onion and 1 diced carrot. Cover and simmer until tender—about 2½ hours. Remove vegetables. Combine and sift together 1½ cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Add ¾ cup milk all at once, mixing just enough to moisten flour. Add water to broth so that chicken is again nearly covered. Bring to gentle boil and drop dumpling mixture by spoonsfuls on liquid. Cover and steam 20 minutes. Remove chicken and dumplings to deep platter. Thicken broth to form gravy, using 1 tablespoon flour for each cup of broth. Pour gravy over chicken and dumplings. Serves 6 generously.

Sweet potatoes are plentiful and of good quality. This is the way to a delicious pudding.

SWEET POTATO PUDDING

Cook enough sweet potatoes to make 2 cupfuls of mashed ones. Melt 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Add the melted fat, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup corn sirup, ¼ cup orange juice and 1 teaspoon grated orange rind to the hot mashed potatoes. Add 2 beaten egg yolks and ½ cup milk. Beat well. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites and then pour mixture into greased baking dish and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 50 to 60 minutes, or until pudding sets.

KETTLE PARTNERS are the meat and vegetables combined to make a flavorsome stew. A top flourish of whipped potatoes on the stew makes a one-dish meal long to be remembered

When Asking Advice Always Give Details

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The aim of this department is service. I want to be as helpful as possible to mothers whose problems do not belong in the field of medicine.

But, in order to help a mother, she has to do her part, too. Few things are so upsetting as to long to give helpful advice and be stymied by lack of information. I get too many letters of this type: "My baby simply cannot sleep. I put her to bed at 6 o'clock and two hours later she is still fussing and crying. Will you tell me what you think could be wrong?"

Now, I ask you, what can anyone say? "My baby" could be a child from birth to two years. Sleep has to do with a dozen aspects of the child's life! diet, principally, opportunities to sleep, naps, beds and bed coverings, noise, etc. To help this particular baby one has to know so much about him or her that one can determine which one of the above causes might be operating to prevent sleep.

In asking for help, there are two kinds—help through the column, which is slow, because there are only six days in the week and thousands of letters weekly; the other is personal advice by letter to the parents and with helpful leaflets supplementing the advice. We have leaflets on every imaginable subject we have found to be of interest to mothers. But if these do not answer her question a personal answer is always included.

So let's help each other. I long to put my teeth into a problem once it is presented to me, but I cannot unless you help me with an accurate description of your baby, his feeding, sleeping habits and activities. No, I am never bored by letters. And I never use anyone's name in the paper! Only initials.

Our leaflet, "Advice to the Prospective Mother," is No. 1 on our list. It may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with this request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Stock Control Of Investment Firm Changes

By S. Oliver Goodman

Acquisition of the majority of the common stock of Investors Syndicate, investment company, by Bert C. Gamble, president of Gamble Stores, Inc., was announced yesterday by Donald A. Loftus of Washington, representing a group of Eastern stockholders. The purchase includes several large privately owned blocks of stock. No change in management is contemplated, Mr. Roftus said.

Mr. Gamble said yesterday his interest in the syndicate and purchase of its stock are "entirely personal affairs and in no manner whatsoever related to my association with Gamble Stores, Inc."

Gamble Stores, Inc., and its affiliates operate approximately 4000 retail stores and dealerships in the West and Midwest.

Investors Syndicate, one of the oldest and largest financial institutions of its kind in the United States, with assets exceeding 340 million dollars, was founded in Minneapolis in 1894. The syndicate acts as investment manager and principal underwriter for: Investors Mutual, Inc., Investors Selective Fund, Inc., and Investors Stock Fund, Inc., mutual open-end investment companies. It also conducts a widespread mortgage loan operation throughout the United States and Canada.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Pratt Elected Eleventh Time

Walter S. Pratt, jr., who has been associated with the Equitable Cooperative Building Association for 46 years, was reelected president for the eleventh year. Shareholders and directors of the organization met yesterday at the annual session and reelected all officers and directors for the coming year.

Mr. Pratt

Established in 1879, Equitable's assets now are at an all-time high of $10,269,234, Secretary Edward L. McAleer disclosed. Other officers include Harry G. Meem, vice president; Mr. McAleer, secretary; J. Harold McDowell and Milton R. Johnson, assistant secretaries. The directors reappointed were Ralph P. Barnard, Charles H. Doing, Arthur B. Heaton, Robert L. Lewis, Theodore W. Noyes, Frank J. Stryker, Col. Wilson L. Townsend, Dr. William Charles White and Messrs. Pratt, Meem and McAleer.

Hint to Businessmen

If more businessmen would get into the Government service there would be "less strift and better working relations between industry and Government," Roger L. Putnam, deputy director of the Office of Contract Settlement said.

"Government is all of us," Putnam said in a prepared address before a meeting of the Packaging Manufacturers Institute. "Business, in the future, cannot afford to take the attitude that it is too busy to bother with government and governmental problems."

He suggested that business grant a year's leave to some of its key men to take a look at the inside of Government.

Lefferts Rejoins Bank

Lieut. Henry H. Lefferts has returned to duties as assistant trust officer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. after almost three years of service in the U. S. Navy Reserve. Lefferts, who is a graduate of the Hargrove Military Academy and George Washington University, has been with the trust company since 1931.

Broad Upturn Sends Stocks To New Peaks

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Steels, utilities, motors and other industrials led a general advance of fractions to around 5 points to new 8 ½-year peaks in today's stock market.

After the Election Day layoff yesterday, volume of 2,380,000 shares was the best since last June 28 and compared with 1,650,000 on Monday.

The 1061 issues dealt in were the largest in modern history and compared with 1049 on May 14, 1940, and 1045 on September 19, 1937. Of this total, 688 advanced, 213 declined and 160 were unchanged.

Establishing summits for 1945 or longer were American Telephone, up 4; Chrysler, up 5 ⅝; Montgomery Ward, General Motors Sears Roebuck and Union Pacific. A few stocks, however, were down from tops for the session.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite rose .7 of a point to 15.0—best since March 10, 1937, when it stood at 75.3. Industrials, rails and utilities all touched new peaks since 1937.

Higher were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Goodyear, Caterpillar Tractor, Western Union "A," International Nickel, American Can, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney, Santa Fe, Standard Oil (N. J.), and National Distilleries.

Bonds moved ahead sharply on broad investment demand. Chicago wheat was unchanged to ⅞ cent a bushel down, corn unchanged at the ceilings, oats ¼ to ⅞ off and rye ¼ up to 2½ lower. Cotton ended 35 to 65 cents a bale higher.

Bristol-Myers Up 10 on Splitup Plan

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Directors of Bristol-Myers Co. today proposed a two for one split up of the common stock which brought a rise of more than 10 points in the stock just before the close of trading on the exchange.

The board also declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share on the common and the usual interim payment of 50 cents, both payable December 1 to stock of record November 16. This is the first extra paid since late in 1941.

Stockholders will vote on the split-up proposal, calling for each of the 700,280 shares of $5 par to be changed into two shares with a par of $2.50, at a meeting on December 18.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 7 (AP).—Profit-taking on yesterday's sharp upturn caused reactions in grain futures today, although the only big loss was in September rye, which fell 2½ cents a bushel.

The only gainer on the board, outside of barley, was the tight December rye delivery, which climbed as much as 2½ cents a bushel on short-covering at the opening. It later fell considerably, however, to finish with a ¼ cent lower.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅞ lower than the previous finish, December 1.80½; corn was unchanged at ceilings, December 1.18½; oats were off ¼ to ⅞, December 70⅝@70⅝; rye was ¼ higher to 2½ cents lower, December 1.73⅝@1.73¾, and barley was ⅝ to ½ down, December 1.20⅞.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 7 (AP).—Cotton futures rose $1.20 a bale in broad trading today to establish new season's highs before gains were pared on commission house profit taking and considerable hedge selling attracted by the advance.

Final prices were 35 to 65 cents a bale higher. Expectations of a lower cotton crop forecast tomorrow, aggressive demand for spot cotton at the primary markets and indications of a broadened export demand soon, supported the upward movement.

Arlington Students Organize Civic Symphony Orchestra

Organization of an Arlington Civic Symphony orchestra which will give concerts in winter and summer was announced yesterday by the Arlington County school board.

The orchestra is under the joint sponsorship of the Arlington County school board and civic groups. School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp said yesterday that he hoped the orchestra wiuld be the "forerunner of numerous instrumental groups in the school system."

The orchestra will be conducted by Van Lier Lanning, former director of the Washington Sinfonietta and the War Production Board Symphony, and will operate as an amateur, semi-professional non-profit organization.

In announcing the organization the school board said the group will "fill long felt need for more musical activity in Arlington County," and that the orchestra "will not only provide an outlet for talented amateur musicians through participation as players and soloists but will also give series of concerts during the winter and summer months for the enjoyment of all residents of the county."

Under proposed plans, concerts will be given in pairs in the Washington-Lee High School auditorium and the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School auditorium, in order to allow all residents of the county opportunity to attend.

Registration of players and preliminary auditions will be held this month on every Monday and Wednesday evening from 7 to 9 p. m. in the small auditorium of the Washington-Lee High School. Rehearsals will be held there each Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Visitors are invited to attend the rehearsals, school board members stated.

Van Lier Lanning, as conductor, has had 15 years experience as a conductor and more than 25 years in the field of music. Superintendent Kemp declared that Lanning's "outstanding work with musical amateurs has succeeded in making groups with which he has been affiliated rank at the top of a city's amateur symphony orchestras."
